Art by Daniel P. Black

Down a long private road, you'll find the gated entrance of this magnificent waterfront home. This one of a kind residence of almost 10,000 sq.ft. was completed in 1996 and is situated on a hillside overlooking 5 acres of exceptional grounds with three ponds, numerous specimen trees and winding stone paths through extensive perennial gardens. The first floor offers a grand living room with a true cathedral ceiling and fireplace, a gourmet kitchen with top-of-the-line appliances, granite counter tops, walk-in pantry and wine cellar, a formal dining room, a cozy family room and a library, each with its own fireplace. The junior master suite with garden room and private office complete the first floor. On the second floor you'll enjoy a spacious master suite with fireplace, exercise room, two walk-in closets and numerous, hand crafted, built ins. The master bath features a steam shower, Swedish sauna, and radiant heated limestone floors. There are three large bedrooms with bathrooms on the second level as well. Downstairs is a beautifully finished basement with bedroom, living room and full bath. A separate guest house, 18x42 gunite pool, gazebo with fireplace, Har-Tru tennis court, separate exercise studio, multiple patios and a large dock on Fish Creek, providing easy access to Moriches Bay, rounds out this truly unique offering.

Children Can't Really Build Hospitals. But You Can

Summer on Long Island. Days to relax and recharge. Memories to paint in sun and sand, in wind and water. But while you and your children are frolicking with friends, or fighting over that last burger at the barbecue, other children are fighting for their lives. For them, a summer day is just another 24 hours of childhood lost forever.

Fortunately, there's a place on Long Island where people understand what it is to be young, sick and afraid. Where extraordinary pediatric medicine is practiced in a child-friendly environment. Where families from around the corner and around the world come to find hope and healing.

That place is Schneider Children's Hospital.

But with more and more sick children seeking treatment each year, the Children's Hospital is bursting at the seams. We must build a new inpatient hospital. Our children deserve it!

And that is where we need your financial support. Schneider Children's Hospital has embarked on an ambitious quest to raise the $100 million it will take to build this new hospital to serve the growing needs of sick children worldwide. There are many opportunities for families and corporations to create a lasting legacy while making a critical difference in thousands of young lives.

Call 516-465-2569 today and help us make this dream come true. Their hope is in your hands.

The Emerald Adventure of Your Lifetime!

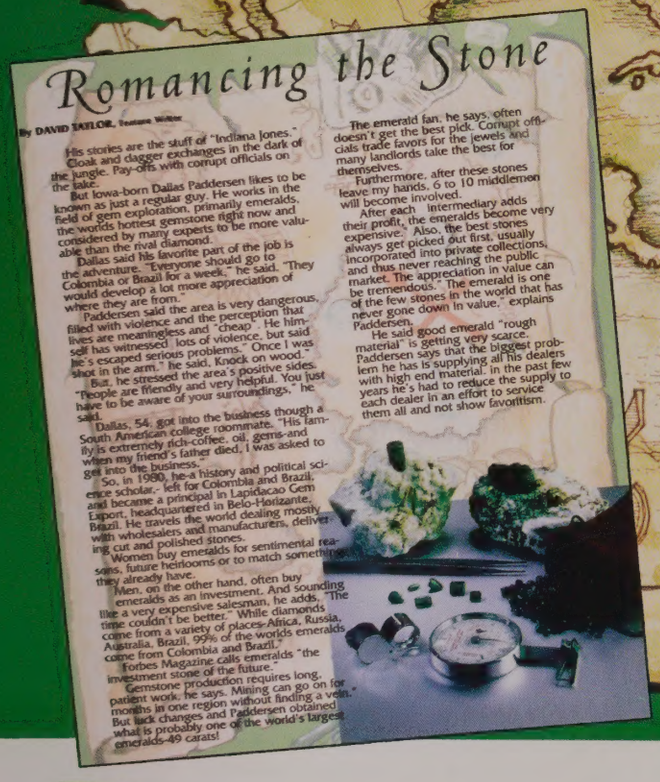
Without the Mosquitoes, Bandits and Snakes!

From the Mines of South America – a rare opportunity to buy Direct.

Save Hundreds, even Thousands of Dollars!

AS A GIFT OR AN INVESTMENT!

Meet the modern day "Indiana Jones" explorer and adventurer Dallas Pattersen – bringing his prized emeralds and other colored gemstones from around the world!



Romancing the Stone

By DAVID TAYLOR, Feature Writer

His stories are the stuff of "Indiana Jones." Cloak and dagger exchanges in the dark of the jungle. Pay-offs with corrupt officials on the lake.

But Iowa-born Dallas Paddersen likes to be known as just a regular guy. He works in the field of gem exploration, primarily emeralds, the worlds hottest gemstone right now and considered by many experts to be more valuable than the rival diamond.

Dallas said his favorite part of the job is the adventure. "Everyone should go to Colombia or Brazil for a week," he said. "They would develop a lot more appreciation of where they are from."

Paddersen said the area is very dangerous, filled with violence and the perception that lives are meaningless and "cheap". He himself has witnessed lots of violence, but said he's escaped serious problems." Once I was shot in the arm," he said, knock on wood."

But, he stressed the area's positive sides. "People are friendly and very helpful. You just have to be aware of your surroundings," he said.

Dallas, 54, got into the business though a South American college roommate. "His family is extremely rich-coffee, oil, gems-and when my friend's father died, I was asked to get into the business.

So, in 1980, he-a history and political science scholar,- left for Colombia and Brazil, and became a principal in Lapidacao Gem Export, headquartered in Belo-Horizanite, Brazil. He travels the world dealing mostly with wholesalers and manufacturers, delivering cut and polished stones.

Women buy emeralds for sentimental reasons, future heirlooms or to match something they already have.

Men, on the other hand, often buy emeralds as an investment. And sounding like a very expensive salesman, he adds, "The time couldn't be better." While diamonds come from a variety of places-Africa, Russia, Australia, Brazil, 99% of the worlds emeralds come from Colombia and Brazil."

Forbes Magazine calls emeralds "the investment stone of the future."

Gemstone production requires long, patient work, he says. Mining can go on for months in one region without finding a vein." But luck changes and Paddersen obtained what is probably one of the world's largest emeralds-49 carats!

The emerald fan, he says, often doesn't get the best pick. Corrupt officials trade favors for the jewels and many landlords take the best for themselves.

Furthermore, after these stones leave my hands, 6 to 10 middlemen will become involved.

After each intermediary adds their profit, the emeralds become very expensive." Also, the best stones always get picked out first, usually incorporated into private collections, and thus never reaching the public market. The appreciation in value can be tremendous. The emerald is one of the few stones in the world that has never gone down in value," explains Paddersen.

He said good emerald "rough material" is getting very scarce. Paddersen says that the biggest problem he has is supplying all his dealers with high end material- in the past few years he's had to reduce the supply to each dealer in an effort to service them all and not show favoritism.

ZAGAT NEW YORK CITY GOURMET MARKETPLACE 2006

■ "A wine aficionado's paradise", this legendary Madison Avenue purveyor, once again the survey's #1 store in its category, is lauded for its "deep, deep selection" that while "strongest in high-end Bordeaux" (find "that double magnum of '82 Lafite-Rothschild") is "comprehensive" in all regions and price points, including nearly 400 options under $10; rest assured, "even if you don't look rich and want an inexpensive bottle of Beaujolais", the staff will be "helpful", but if you can't stop by, or are frustrated that only a "fraction of the bottles are on display" they "have a great Web site" and catalog, both of which include lots of accessories.

The fine art of moving.

Some competitors just do not understand. They brush aside the notion that a "move" is as emotional for you as it is physical for them. The professionals from Despatch Moving & Storage, view their job differently. Their goal – picture-perfect moves. They understand that it's your move, not theirs. So we make sure they're trained in the art of Tender Loving Care. We provide them with state-of-the-art packing materials. And when it comes to carefully loading your possessions onto our trucks, they are TLC masters in safe transit.

Whether your move is big or small, down the street or across the country, give Despatch a call – they'll create a masterpiece for you.

Plovers Attack

Birds Work Together to Stage Assault on Bather in Hampton Bays

By Dan Rattiner

The Hampton Police have released the report of an attack on a five-year-old by piping plovers last Thursday on a beach in Hampton Bays. The child got away uninjured and shortly after the attack the birds dispersed. But it happened. Or may have happened.

"We only have the word of the parents of this little girl," Hampton Chief Reynolds said at a press conference on Monday, indicating that the name of the child would not be given out at this time. "By the time the police got there, the piping plovers were skittering innocently around in a normal fashion on the beach as they always do, pecking at sand flies. Nothing appeared to be amiss."

The Chief said, however, that he wanted to make this episode public to see if anyone else in the community has suffered an incident such as this.

According to the report, the parents and the toddler were lying on blankets under an umbrella when a small army of piping plovers skittered toward them from the left side of the beach in a menacing fashion. They tried to shoo the birds away — these are just four-inch long birds that are on the endangered species list — but there were so many of them that it had no effect.

They left the blanket quickly, and backed toward the right, only to find that it had been a trap, and there was another army of plovers just behind a dune who then proceeded to march forward toward them from the opposite direction. As the trap began to close, several of the more aggressive birds fluttered over and tried to peck at the little girl and at the ankles of the parents, but the parents picked up the little girl and quickly fled down a path at the back of the beach, only to pass still another army of plovers who were advancing toward the beach to block their path there.

"We got out just in time," the mother breathlessly said to the police later.

The piping plovers are a small four-inch long white bird with grey wingtips and a white band around their necks. They are not to be confused with starlings or other shorebirds. The white band is the telltale mark of a plover.

> A group of plovers killed a seagull in Amagansett in July. And in August, several groups of plovers trapped and killed a red fox.

Just 25 years ago, the piping plovers seemed headed for extinction. In 1982 they were labeled a "threatened species" on the endangered species list. Two years later, local groups began a major effort to find, shelter and protect the piping plovers during their vulnerable mating and child-rearing season. When a piping plover nest was found, a snow fence was placed around it and signs put up telling bathers to stay away from that particular beach or face a substantial fine. The snow fence would remain up from April to after the birds left the nest, which was usually not until in July or August.

In 1984, the number of piping plovers counted on our beaches was just 191 and just six beaches were fenced off. The count this year was over 400 with nearly half of all beaches in the Hamptons either entirely or partially closed because of plovers. In 2005, the Fourth of July Fireworks was cancelled at East Hampton Main Beach because of the plovers.

At the press conference, Chief Reynolds said that he would not be asking local residents to be on the lookout for aggressive plover behavior as a result of just one incident. He said this was the first time this behavior had involved bathers. But it was not the first time aggressive plover behavior had been seen in the Hamptons.

In an article about a Democratic political fundraiser in our August 25 issue entitled TAKE DOWN THOSE PHOTOS OF OUR MEN IN UNIFORM, we stated that New York State Democratic Committee Member Trudy Mason played a role in not having photo panels of soldiers who had died in Iraq displayed. She informs us that she would have been in favor of the panels at an anti-war rally but that she felt they were inappropriate at a political fundraiser. She says she was also not the only one involved who felt this way.

"It began two years ago," he said. "One of our interns said he saw a group of about 50 piping plovers corner and then briefly attack a French poodle in Westhampton Beach. And last summer, there were two incidents. A group of plovers killed a seagull in Amagansett in July. And in August, several groups of plovers trapped and killed a red fox, which normally attacks THEM. And they did it by employing the same classical military tactics as they used this past Thursday in Hampton Bays."

Beware of Plovers marching together in groups, he said.

Earlier this spring, with the apparent success of the Plover preservation program, there were certain people, East Hampton Town Supervisor Bill McGintee among them, who were pressing to have all the snow fences lifted since the job of saving plovers was done.

Now there is no further talking about removing the fences. As Chief Reynolds said, if there are more reports of plover attacks, it might be necessary to keep the fences up and post a guard to make sure the plovers don't get out.

Or, if environmentalists object to that on the grounds that it is illegally confining creatures listed as endangered, perhaps the fences could be kept up with a guard posted outside to keep the bathers and sun worshippers inside and safe from the marauding piping plovers.

"We feel that if it comes to this," the Chief said, "we have the manpower to safely escort sunbathers to these fenced in spots, so long as they stay close to the armed guards and move in groups as instructed."

You've been warned. •

Clean Beaches

Freedom of Speech, Like it or Not, at Sagg Main Beach in Sagaponack

By Dan Rattiner

Yesterday at 6 p.m., I got in my Land Rover and drove from my office down to the beach at Sagg Main to write a story. You can drive out onto the beach itself after 6 pm in the summertime, and I do that, driving as far as I can down the beach to get to some isolated spot.

The particular one I found on this day was off to the west of the pavilion, at a point where a sandbar is created between Sagg Pond and the ocean. There is usually someone kayaking in the pond here at this hour as this is a good dragging point. Sometimes there are surfcasters or surfers. But for the most part, if you park a good distance from anybody else, people respect your privacy. I took out a folding chair, a blanket and an umbrella and set them up facing the ocean not far from the truck. Then I opened my laptop, sat down in the chair and commenced to write an article for this newspaper. I've been doing this almost every day for twenty years.

The story was actually about the planet Pluto and it efforts to keep from being cast out of the solar system.

At that moment, as I was deep in thought trying to describe this controversy, I noticed out of the corner of my eye that someone was approaching me. You have to understand that I get totally engrossed in my work when I write. If people do come by, I let them know quickly I am busy writing just now. Sorry, they'll say, and move along. It's all right, I'll reply.

"Hi," this person said.

I looked up. He was a pleasant looking man of about forty-five in a bathing suit and t-shirt. I did not know him. He stood there, facing me.

"Hi," I said. I waved at my computer. "I'm writing a story."

In response, he sat down on the sand directly in front of me. We were going to have

SOUTHAMPTON TOWN FIGHTS FOR BEACH ACCESS

By Dan Rattiner

If Robert Simpson of East 61st Street in Manhattan thinks for one minute that the Town of Southampton is going to stand by and permit the closing off of vehicular traffic upon the land the Town owns beachfront in Bridgehampton, he's got another thing coming. Last week, the Town sent a bulldozer down to the sand driveway of this property to remove some boulders Mr. Simpson placed on this town-owned land. Two years ago, the Town sent equipment out to remove some concrete posts that Mr. Simpson had placed there.

The 2.7-acre parcel owned by the town is of some interest to Mr. Simpson because townspeople keep trying to use it and he lives right next door. He bought the parcel next door six years ago, and although the prior owner and the town got along just fine for twenty years, Mr. Simpson felt that things would be much quieter for him and his friends and family if he simply blocked the ability of the townspeople to use their property. Twice now he has tried to do so. Twice the town has come down to the beach to remove his obstructions.

The property in question is a formerly private recreation area at the eastern end of a 23-lot subdivision that runs on the south side of Surfside Drive in Bridgehampton. Surfside is the last left off Ocean Road. On the south side of Surfside, the lots border the ocean. On the north side they are inland. The Simpson parcel is the last building lot on the ocean side of this dead end road. The town parcel is a recreation property originally owned in common by the 23.

The history of these properties is very straightforward. Until 1965, the property was owned by one individual. And there was no Surfside Drive.

In 1965, a developer (BRIDGEHAMPTON

a meeting.

"I wanted to talk to you," he said. "You're an editor, right? Somebody down the beach told me you were. I'm looking for an editor. Somebody said I ought to find an editor from the East Hampton Star or some other paper, but then they said you work for a paper. So I thought I'd talk to you. Maybe you can do something about this."

Well, the spell had been broken. I was no longer writing. So it was break time. I was not happy about this.

"Have you ever noticed how DIRTY the beaches are?" the man asked. Actually I thought they were rather clean is what went through my mind. "I am very offended by this. People throw paper cups on the beach. People leave soda cans, chicken bones. Who is in charge of these things? I called the Village of Sagaponack and they said it was not their problem. I called the Town of Southampton and they said they have people come down to clean up. I tried to follow up, but got left on hold. Then I called back and left a message but nobody called me back."

Indeed they do clean the beaches, is what I thought. In fact, they have a machine that they drive around on the beach and sift the sand to get any trash out. I've seen them.

"I want you to do a campaign to get these beaches clean. If the Town won't do it, then we summer people have to take the lead in arranging for people to do it. It should be a citizen's committee. What do you think?"

"I think the beaches are pretty clean," I said.

"Well, they're not. Every time I come out here I pick up something. I shouldn't have to do this. These are OUR beaches. And you local people, you newspaper editors, should put together a committee to do this."

"What are you talking about?" I asked.

"This has been done in other beach towns. People walk around with bags and sticks. The local people make the mess. They should clean it up. It's only fair."

"You think it's the LOCAL people?" I asked.

"I think its all those people in pickup trucks. They drive along and they eat a baloney sandwich and they throw the wrapper out the window."

This was getting out of hand. "It's not just the local people. No one group is better than another."

"Then who else is it?"

I had an idea. "I once saw a guy driving a Jaguar roll down the window and toss a beer can into the bushes," I said. "It WAS a Heineken."

"So you don't think it's the locals?"

I was getting mad. "I'll tell you what I DO think is a problem with trash on the beach. I wrote an article about it one time. Party balloons. Those big silver things filled with helium that say HAPPY BIRTHDAY on them. They float off, and then they come down either right on the beach or just offshore and they get blown onto shore. Animals and sea creatures can get tangled up in them. This is completely irresponsible."

He seemed taken aback. "Well, that's probably true," he said.

"And these are not LOCAL people who have these parties, these are Summer People who have these parties. I know because I go to these parties. These people order these balloons and then when the party's over they don't think anything further of it." I was warming to the task. "THAT'S what we need a committee for. People who come out here on weekends to stay another day, Monday, out there on the beach with plastic bags and pointed sticks. I'd go for that."

He didn't know quite what to make of this. So he got up. He brushed the sand off his legs. "Well, it's been nice talking to you," he said. And he walked away.

I've seen all sorts of things out at the beach. Seals, beached whales, people building giant sandcastles, kayakers, girls going topless. Biplanes dragging marriage proposal banners. Movie shoots. This was a first. •

Jaws at 30

Steven Spielberg and Roy Scheider Celebrate the Film at Guild Hall

By Dan Rattiner

Exactly thirty years ago, one of the greatest movies ever made had its world premiere here at the East Hampton Cinema. Today, movies have premieres here all the time. But JAWS was the first.

There was a lot of concern back then at Universal Studios about whether this town could handle such a premiere. The stars of the movie from around the world would come. Did we have a red carpet? And would, in life, this movie cause the same kind of panic that it did in the mythical summer resort tourist town that was featured in the film? People had died there. Arms and legs had washed ashore.

The reason the movie premiered here at that time was because it was based on a book that was about the Hamptons. Peter Benchley had visited here. In his book, JAWS, our towns were named. And all the action in the book took place in our towns.

Last Saturday, the evening consisted of a reception at the garden lawn alongside Guild Hall in East Hampton, a screening at the theatre in Guild Hall and then a question and answer session on stage in front of the blank screen, just a few hundred yards to the west of where it had premiered thirty years before. The Q and A featured two of the four main principals of this movie, both of whom had subsequently taken up residence here. Of the other two, one, Robert Shaw, had since died. The other, actor Richard Dreyfus, who had been here just three weeks ago as part of a documentary premiere, could have come but didn't, apparently because he had other commitments.

That left actor Roy Scheider of Bridgehampton, and director Steven Spielberg of East Hampton. And after the movie, they sat onstage taking questions from interviewer David Koepp, a man who had been chosen by Spielberg and had worked with him as a screenwriter on many of his later films.

BEACH BOYS OPEN FOR THE "FOR SURE" BAND HERE

By Dan Rattiner

I have always maintained that about fifteen years ago, the authorities here in the Hamptons fired off a special gas into the atmosphere that affected the local populace. Before that time, there were few celebrities in the area and the locals all prided themselves on helping those here keep their lives private. After that time, it was every man for himself.

For me, the way it played out was like this. Before the emitting of this celebrity gas, I would come into a room and people would look up and see me and then look down again. There's Dan who runs Dan's Papers is what they'd think to themselves.

After the gas got put into the atmosphere, I would be heading into a room and just ahead of me, maybe fifteen paces, would be Bianca Jagger. She'd go into the room first and everybody would get all excited. Then I'd come into the room and once again everybody would get all excited.

THERE'S DAN WHO RUNS DAN'S PAPERS!

My 22-year-old son Gabriel got a taste of this last Tuesday. And it was all about him. He will not soon forget it.

Gabriel is a member of what he refers to as a "cover band" meaning that they play the songs of one particular famous group, in his case a band called No Doubt. They call themselves For Sure. And as they have practiced and rehearsed in my basement on many occasions, I can tell you they play very well.

Last Tuesday, the band was invited to play a set at the Beach Boys concert in East Hampton hosted by Bill and Karie Gardiner. They would not warm up for the Beach Boys. The Beach Boys would go on first. The Beach Boys would warm up for THEM.

The event was a tremendous success and

The film had originally been planned to follow the plot of the book and be set in the Hamptons, but upon investigation, it was found that the Hamptons were too busy a place, even then, to serve as a movie version of themselves. A lot had changed since the book had been written. And by 1975, the Hamptons was too connected up with the city. Having a killer shark twenty five feet long in your community and have it sustain its dining habits for an extended period while the local authorities keep a lid on this behavior to avoid having the tourists stay away would require a much more isolated location — an enclosed world. Martha's Vineyard came to mind. So that's where they shot it.

The premise, of course, was that killer sharks eat people. And they do. At the garden reception, I spoke for a while with Richard Garvey of Australia and his new American wife, Kim, who were at the reception through film studio connections.

"Yes, we've had a bit of a go with sharks in the past few years," Garvey told me. "Four eaten in the last six years. But we get on with it. I know a woman who lost her son. And I have an uncle who dragged himself ashore with a ten-footer clamped around his ankle, flipping his tail on the sand. Some others beat him off. He survived."

I spoke to Toni Ross of Nick and Toni's at the reception. Andy Stein was there. I talked to Brenda and Roy Scheider. Steven Spielberg came alone. And everybody wanted to meet with him, including me. And so I took the opportunity to talk with him.

He said, most surprisingly, that he much preferred East Hampton to Los Angeles. And if it weren't for his connection with Dreamworks, he wouldn't even be there. He asked me if I knew about a huge new movie studio being built in Brooklyn, one that could allow him to do almost anything. I had nothing to offer him on that subject. But others told him it's on the way.

Someone brought up the subject of the Holocaust and he talked about the camps he had visited, mostly in Poland. His Shoah Project is known worldwide. I had been at Buchenwald in the forest above the industrial town of Essen some years ago, one of the smaller camps in Germany, and I talked with him about that. Later, at the Q & A after they showed the movie, he was asked if he had one movie he has made that was his own personal favorite.

"They are all my babies," he said, "but I think the one I am most pleased about is Schindler's List. As for Jaws, I owe everything to it. It made my career. After Jaws I could make any movie I wanted."

He was asked his favorite scene in Jaws. It was the same as practically everybody's favorite scene. It's when the three main characters, the police chief played by Scheider, the environmentalist played by Dreyfus, and the partly unhinged shark fisherman played by Shaw are sitting around a table on the fishing boat one night during one of the quiet times between terrifying shark encounters and they have had too much to drink. They are passing the time by comparing scars.

"Yeah?" says Dreyfus. "Well, what about this?" And he puts his leg on the table and shows a scar on his calf where a shark bit him ten years earlier. Shaw counters with a scar on his forehead. And so forth.

"There's this one part of the scene," Spielberg said, "which I love, where Scheider, standing off to one side, thinks to show them his appendix scar," Spielberg said. "He pulls up his shirt to reveal it, but then thinks this wouldn't count, thinks better of it and tucks his shirt back in his pants."

The film, all on the stage agreed, was large-

Pluto Etc.

Who the Hell Do We Think We Are, Making Decisions About This?

By Dan Rattiner

"Do you think there should be more planets than nine?"

Two weeks ago, I was online, on AOL, reading the latest news. There had been a series of articles about Pluto, our ninth planet, and three more wannabe planets. Should our solar system allow twelve planets? AOL wants to know what the members think.

I remembered the slogan about planets from when I was a boy. It went "My Very Energetic Mother Just Served Us Nine Pizzas." And it was a trick way of answering the question "please name all the planets, beginning with the one closest to the sun."

Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, Pluto. That's us. A happy little clan. Working together. At peace with one another. And in recent years, we've been sending space ships out to visit some of them.

I voted "yes." Bring 'em on. And then I clicked on "read results." And what came up was a surprise. Of the 132,416 people who voted, 68% had voted yes. And 32% had voted no. Stop at nine.

Well, apparently there are scientists at a conference in Prague who have just voted that there shall be just eight. Pluto has gotten the boot. "My Very Energetic Mother Just Served Us Nine." Nine what?

There was a considerable argument about Pluto, and about some other possible planets. The discussion raged back and forth. There were those that argued that Pluto should be stripped of its planethood because it is made of ice. When it was discovered, which was in 1930, they didn't know that. All they knew was that it was circling the sun, it was round like all the other planets and the only reason we hadn't seen it before was that we didn't have telescopes powerful enough to notice it was ice.

Others argued that Pluto is, in fact, only 3,000 miles in diameter. If it hit the earth and smashed itself flat, it wouldn't even reach from New York City to Los Angeles. It was smaller than our moon. And so very, very far away.

Furthermore, now that we have found it to be just a ball of ice and all, there is the obvious fact that if someday the solar system ever went haywire and certain highly unlikely events were to happen such as Pluto making a dive for the sun, it would, on the way there, melt. So who's fooling whom?

The director of the Rose Planetarium in New York was on the side of those wishing to boot it from the solar system. And he had taken matters into his own hands. He had sent some workmen up on ladders to work on a large and proportionately accurate display just below the ceiling in the main lobby. The workmen took a screwdriver and wrench to Pluto, which was spinning smartly on a wire and circling the sun from a great distance as were the other eight spheres in this motorized display, and they took it down and out the back door and threw it into the dumpster as they were told. That was the director's opinion.

> One argued that no matter what it's made of, even ice, if it circles the sun, it's a planet.

So the arguments in Prague continued. And soon there were factions. One argued that no matter what it's made of, even ice, if it circles the sun, it's a planet. Another faction said that if it's made of anything at all and it's large enough for its gravity to have gathered it up into a sphere and it circles the sun, it's a planet. Still another faction said if it circles the sun and it's spherical and fits all the other parameters but it's made of ice it isn't a planet. And still another faction said if it's not spherical, no matter what it's made of, and even if it circles the sun, it's not a planet.

I might add that a sort of curve ball thrown into this is that the first eight planets all circle the sun in the same plane, but Pluto doesn't. At first it appeared it would be OK for it to do that.

And then there were other objects out there that had to be considered for our solar system. There was Ceres, the largest asteroid, circling the sun as part of the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter. There was Xena, even smaller than Pluto at only 2,000 miles across, which was discovered in 2005 beyond Pluto by a scientist who looked very, very hard through his telescope, and there was one of the moons of Pluto, known as Charon, which scientists have just recently discovered is not actually circling Pluto, but is circling a spot between itself and Pluto. In other words, it looks to some scientists like two planets that got caught up with one another in a kind of dance. And from that perspective, if Pluto is a planet, then so is Charon. A boy and a girl.

Early on, these battling scientists agreed that whatever was decided would be accepted by all. You couldn't have eight planets in the solar system according to the French, nine planets according to the Chinese, and twelve planets according to the Brazilians. And so the fat was in the fire.

Wonder which way Saturn voted?

They could compromise. Scientists can be democratic. Majority would rule. That's the American way.

I think what might have put them off going up to 12 planets was the reality of what they would have to do next. They would have to write a letter inviting in Charon, Xena and Ceres. The invitation would be polite, would say that we on Earth have thought of them, and describe the benefits of joining our solar system. And then we'd ask these three to each in their turn take a vote. It would be a very awkward letter. We would have to describe the boycotts and so forth that would ensue if they continue to remain in our midst and choose to turn down entry. Perhaps one or two or even all three of these celestial bodies will ask to join. Or not. It could happen. Perhaps we would learn they belonged to another solar system and are just here temporarily as observers of ours. Or worse. Spies.

Then there was the issue of human rights. Or whatever rights. Had we looked closely at how the rulers treat the, uh, people? Maybe they'd like to be on some waiting list for an application at a later time when such things as torture and incarceration without legal representation, or censorship and other restrictions can be done away with. We do have our standards after all.

When you consider that among humans using AOL on the third planet from the sun, 31% voted no, it does give pause. It was complicated. And so they decided not to go up to 12. They'd come down to eight.

One final thought. You know that movie "When Worlds Collide" where the earth gets swept away by a passing meteor but the moon remains?

If that happened, could the moon apply to be a planet? •

ly a horror film, but was even more largely a film about relationships — specifically the relationship between the three main characters.

"We had plenty of time to develop our relationships," Scheider said, "because the damn mechanical shark kept breaking down. So we just sat around. We did that for months."

"It was supposed to be a 45 day shoot," Spielberg said, wistfully. "It turned out to take 156 days. So I guess we went over."

This was very hard on Spielberg. He was only 26 years old when filming started, and it was his second film. The big shots in production in Hollywood kept pressing to replace him as director. He wouldn't have blamed them what with all the delays. But the thought terrified him.

Cigarette Giant Reverses Stance on Selling to Reservations — For Now

By Jerry Cimisi

On July 11, Philip Morris USA said it would allow none of its cigarettes to be sold untaxed at Indian reservations. But then, on August 24, the corporate giant (which also has under its umbrella Kraft Foods) announced that "given the evolving legal environment" it was "suspending" the July 11 notice, pending further developments.

Although the Philip Morris announcement did not elaborate on the matter of the "legal environment," it was clearly a reference to a court action in the progress of a lawsuit brought in Buffalo by a cigarette distributor against New York State. More on that in a moment.

The legal situation concerning the sale of cigarettes on Indian reservations has been coming to a head this year. Or, more precisely, every time it seems that something is about to be finalized, a legal or political maneuver leaves the issue hanging in the air.

There are two Indian Reservations on Long Island, and they are both on the East End: there are the Unkechaugs on the Poosepatuck Reservation in Mastic by Moriches Bay, and the Shinnecocks on their reservation in venerable Southampton by, of course, Shinnecock Bay.

Cigarette sales on Indian reservations are big business. A New York State Health Department survey claims that more than a third of the state's smokers regularly indulge their habit via the tax-free sales at reservations. Moreover, 22 percent of New York smokers say the reservations are their preferred source of smokes.

But the status of that source remaining unchanged has been threatened in the past year, even if for now "it's business as usual," as Unkechaug Chief Harry Wallace recently said at the Poosepatuck Trading Supply and Smoke Shop.

There is a lot of confusion about this issue, about bills that have been passed by the state, bills that Governor Pataki did or did not veto, agreements by Philip Morris with the New York

TOWN MAY SAVE AMAGANSETT FARMERS MARKET

By David Lion Rattiner

It looks like the Town of East Hampton has its eyes on an important piece of property in Amagansett, bringing a wave of relief to morning coffee regulars at the Amagansett Farmers Market. The Farmers Market has been for sale as is, for $9.5 million, for about a year. When it was announced that the Farmer's Market was being put up for sale last year, the whole town started to worry that one day the Farmers Market would no longer be a Farmer's Market or a farm, but would be knocked down to make way for sub-divided lots with McMansions sparkling the landscape.

But the Town of East Hampton, always weary of such proposals, fearing that overdevelopment of priceless gems such as the Farmer's Market will adversely affect the tourist economy, has officially made an offer to buy the Amagansett Farmers Market. Although the 9.48 acre property has been for sale for $9.5 million, nobody has talked any numbers on the offer. However, the Peconic Land Trust, which is the trust that is used to buy property like this, has a history of purchasing property near asking prices or the appraised value.

Where does the Town get all of this money to buy property on this scale and at these prices? Well, it is a pretty simple concept known as the Community Preservation Fund. Money pours into the fund from real estate transactions that occur throughout the Town. When a house sells in East Hampton, a 2 percent tax is paid on the price of the property that is sold and is then put into the fund. So in other words, if a house here sells for a million dollars, ten thousand dollars goes to the town. Then that money is used to buy pieces of property of community or visual value, such as farmland, campgrounds or parks. Needless to say, the tax has

State Attorney General and so on.

"The problem is," said Tom Bergin of the New York State Department of Tax and Finance, "there are three things that happened this year that people are getting mixed up."

First there was the bill to limit sales of untaxed cigarettes sold on Indian reservations to only residents of the reservations. People coming from outside the reservation would have to pay the usual tax. Begin said, "That bill was presented to the governor last year, in 05, but he vetoed it. The bill came back to him this year; he signed it. The law was to go into effect on March 1. But the tax commissioner [Andrew S. Eristoff] wanted some amendments to it, asked the legislature to consider reworking it — and basically the commissioner did not want to enforce the law as it was, so even though the law has been in effect since March 1, no one is enforcing it."

On the other hand, there is the comment from Marc Violette, a spokesman for the New York State Attorney General's office, who said, "From the point of view of the attorney general's office, it is clear and unambiguous that the law has been in effect since March 1."

"Then," Begin went on, "there is the other bill that Pataki vetoed this year that said cigarette manufacturers can't sell to wholesalers or distributors who in turn sell untaxed product to Indian reservations.

"Third, there's the lawsuit in Buffalo, brought by one of the distributors. The judge apparently felt there was a lot of confusion about this matter — and there is — and issued a temporary restraining order effective until a hearing on September 25."

It was the tempo[illegible] restraining order that prompted Philip Morris to rescind its July 11 announcement that its distributors must have New York State tax stamps affixed to all its brands sold to Indian reservations.

In fact, early in 2006, Philip Morris USA voluntarily entered into an agreement mapped out by attorney generals from 37 states, New York being among them, to curb or terminate sales to sources that would sell to customers illegally — such as violating tax laws at Indian reservations or via the Internet.

Internet sales are seen not only as a common way for buyers to avoid paying tax, but for those under the age limit (currently 19 years old in New York State) to procure cigarettes.

Philip Morris USA and Philip Morris International, along with Kraft Foods, does business under the umbrella of the Altria Group.

As of this writing, Altria is trading for just over $84 on the New York Stock Exchange, with the price of its stock this year varying from a low of $68.36 to a high of $85.

It might be safe to say that any agreement Philip Morris makes with the states, voluntary or legal, is ultimately made with financial interests in mind. That goes for the states, too.

In 2003, the abovementioned 37 state attorneys general filed a "friend-of-the-court" brief urging an Illinois court to reduce a $12 billion bond needed for Philip Morris USA to appeal a decision that awarded $10.1 billion to these states on the grounds that the cigarette manufacturer had misled the public on the health effects of light cigarettes. The states wanted their money, of course, but the court said that in order for Philip Morris to appeal the verdict it had to put up a $12 billion bond — that's the original judgment plus interest.

Philip Morris said this would put the company in danger of bankruptcy, while the states argued this would prevent Philip Morris from making its monthly payment of $2.6 billion to the states.

Speaking of billions: in 1998, Philip Morris and other tobacco companies reached an agreement with 45 states, five U.S. territories and the District of Columbia to pay an immediate $10 billion and then, over the ensuing 25 years, pay out $200 billion. After that quarter of a century had passed, the tobacco companies would continue to make as yet to be determined payments to the states in perpetuity.

As for the immediate issue of taxed or untaxed cigarettes being sold on Indian reservations: Lance Gumbs, proprietor of the Shinnecock Indian Outpost, could not be reached for comment, though in the past he has said that the current push to control how Native Americans sell cigarettes threatened not only the economic survival of the tribes but the traditional sovereignty of Indian nations.

When asked how the Unkechaugs would react should the already passed as well as pending legislation go into effect, Chief Harry Wallace simply said, "We'll continue to fight it, as we always have."

Southampton Church Officials Decline to Sell Church for $10 Million

By Renée Donlon

Ground beef: $2.69 a pound. Canned peaches: 2 for $3. The Southampton Full Gospel Church: $10 million.

So seem the prices at King Kullen this summer since the supermarket chain offered the Full Gospel Church $10 million for the ten acres it owns on County 39 in the village of Southampton.

Yet the church was not led into temptation by the million-an-acre offer. Though approached on four or five occasions by the supermarket, the church declined the proposal. Their reasons for passing on the proposition were not financial, but rather spiritual. Reverend Donald Havrilla explains that the offer was rejected because the church feels that it has a spiritual obligation to remain in its current location. "We believe God has us here, that we are here for a purpose," he said. The Reverend went on to explain that part of that purpose was to take a "stand against abortion, the homosexual agenda, and other immoral issues and ungodliness." He feels that it is the responsibility of the church to take "an active role and expose" such issues, and that the church can best do that by retaining its current place in the community.

> The Full Gospel Church feels that its prominent presence in the community should not be interrupted.

And what does the community feel would be best for that place? Ann LaWall, Executive Director of the Southampton Business Alliance, believes that while the community needs another supermarket, the church's property is not the right location for it. Her ideas, however, are not religious. Instead, they are based on another power that holds the Hamptons at its mercy: the traffic. "Absolutely, sure, we need another [supermarket]," claims LaWall, "but [the church] is not the proper location due to the traffic." LaWall is concerned that shoppers entering and exiting a supermarket there would create more accidents on a "highway that is dangerous enough."

That would suit the Full Gospel Church just fine as they say they have no future plans to give up their location. The church will not relinquish a property that's acquisition was miraculous. Reverend Havrilla says the church views originally purchasing the land for "under $100,000 as a miracle, and that [they] are not looking to trade off on it." Believers and nonbelievers (and anyone familiar with the price of real estate in the Hamptons) will agree that the price, if not miraculous, was at least amazingly lucky.

The story of how the church came to buy the property is equally fortunate. The Reverend explains that in 1985 the church, due to "growth needs," was looking to move from its former Southampton location. Around that time, a visitor attended the church's services. The "visitor suggested the ten acres on County Road 39," said Havrilla.

The Reverend paused in his story to chuckle slightly as he recalled the Biblical line, "Oh ye of little faith" and then went on to tell of how he did not look at the property knowing the land in that area was bound to be too expensive. When the visitor called to see if the church had examined the property yet, the Reverend "couldn't lie" and admitted they had not looked. The visitor again urged the Reverend to take a look. This time he did fridays at five: richard reeves

By Joan Zandell

It was standing room only at St. Ann's Church in Bridgehampton this past Friday afternoon at 5 p.m. Despite the rain, author Richard Reeves brought out the crowd; umbrellas, cell phones and all. Ken Auletta, who was best man at Reeves' wedding, made the introduction in which he explained that Richard Reeves got his start covering Woodstock for the New York Times. Mr. Auletta went on to say that Mr. Reeves happened to have been his best man at his wedding as well. To which Mr. Reeves responded, "Yes, and we're both married to the same woman."

As the last author of the Hampton Library's Fridays at Five summer writer's series, Richard Reeves spoke about his most recent book, and the last in a presidential trilogy, President Reagan: Triumph of the Imagination.

"Freedom in America," said Mr. Reeves, "is to fail and try again. In America you can reinvent yourself. Historians clean up the news. What they write really isn't true. And yet, presidents are so well documented. For example, Kennedy watched Martin Luther King deliver his 'I Have a Dream' speech on TV. No one knows that it took 18 minutes from the moment he decided to meet with him until Martin Luther King arrived at the White House.

"And the decisions that presidents make.....in the moment that they make those decisions, they have no idea what sort of lasting impact they will have. John F. Kennedy had no idea when he signed the coup in Vietnam, that it would impact the world for the next 20 years.

"Reagan really was not at all what he presented himself to be. I found out that almost all of the conventional wisdom that I had read and heard about Ronald Reagan was not true at all. Beginning with the fact that he was always said to be passive. The man ran for president three times. Won on his third try. And in 1976 he committed the most aggressive act that an American politician can make, and that is that he ran against a sitting president of his own party. He ran against Gerald Ford and damn near beat him. The vote in that convention was 1,187 for President Ford, 1,070 for Ronald Reagan. Passive people don't do that.

"When I got to know him better I discovered the reason he called his staff "the fellows" was that he didn't know their names. They were all interchangeable to him. He ran through everyone he needed to run through, and he treated everyone the same, like they were the hired help. It's true he was disengaged. He didn't read the papers.

"Reagan had a little, teeny agenda; the military, national pride, reducing taxes and confronting communism. He thought the President's job was to lead the nation. He truly understood what very few Presidents have understood, that no one remembers whether Lincoln balanced the budget, they remember what he said.

"He imagined results and made them happen. The Soviets needed a clear US policy. Reagan had one. We win. They lose. He dumbed down America, translating issues into emotions. Reagan was able to make people feel. The merging of fact and fiction established under Reagan has become the American diet; he merged entertainment and fact. He did absolutely nothing to improve healthcare, AIDS, the national debt, and he invented the borrow and spend Republicans. During his last two years in office, the discovery of Iran Contra, his persistent lying about what happened and his pretending not to remember ruined his credibility. As a result, the liberals and the press were against him.

"Mine is the first book to document the Gorbachev and Reagan dialogues. To his credit, Reagan knew that Communism would fall of its own weight. And as fate would have it, he gets a Soviet leader who agrees with him. When Reagan talked to him about the emigration of Soviet Jews, Gorbachov said, 'Ron, you've got your own problems with the Mexicans.' To which Reagan responded, 'There's a big difference between getting out and getting in.'

"On Dec. 8, 1987, Reagan brought Gorbachev to Washington, DC. He truly believed that if he had been able to bring him to California where he could see the swimming pools from the air, that Gorbachev would have been converted.

"Compared to Nixon and Kennedy, who were young men who wanted to know everything, and who wanted to control everything, Ronald

What it Costs to Get a VIP Table at the Hampton Classic Horse Show

By Christian McLean

Everyone has a preference when it comes to sporting events. Some nab box seats at Shea, others call for season tickets on the 50-yard line at the Meadowlands, but this week it's the Hampton Classic and holding a table in the Grand Prix stadium for seven days is just as serious as tickets to the Super Bowl. Sure Sunday is the big day, but families and corporations come from across the country and beyond for an entire week of horse showmanship in the Hamptons. It's a huge event in the hunter-jumper world and with a $150,000 prize why shouldn't it be? But tables are limited in the Grand Prix tent and the price tag for a seat is a little larger than most are willing to spend. But then again, maybe it isn't.

When it all comes down to it, the Hampton Classic is a benefit for Southampton Hospital. So what's a few bucks for a good cause? An 8-top table costs $2000 and a 14-seat table costs $3000. But that isn't exactly the way it works. There is a formula based on sponsorship and spending. It sounds capitalistic, but it isn't. It's a fundraiser, you have to remember that. In order to get an 8-top table, you actually have to sponsor/donate/spend at least $7500 and for the 14-seater it's a minimum of $15,000-$17,500. But this isn't usually a cash out of pocket type transaction. Many of the tables are secured by corporate sponsors. Companies like Calvin Klein, David Yurman, Land Rover, and Prudential have been getting tables for years, and the way they do it is through a sponsorship package. The packages include event sponsorship, signage, booths in the Garden Boutique, etc. All that adds up. If you buy the back cover of the Horse Show Program then you've already spent $7500 and are well on your way to an 8-top. But when you put down the big money, say sponsor Sunday's $150,000 Grand Prix event, you've probably just secured the best table in the tent. When all this is done, the table fee gets waived.

SAVING HORSES IN SAGAPONACK, ONE AT AT TIME

By Christian McLean

There are a lot of horses in America and when they can no longer be cared for; when funds run low, when the horses don't perform well, or are outgrown, something has to be done with them. They get put up for adoption, they get put down, they become dinner. There is factual evidence that Native Americans used to eat horse. That doesn't happen in America anymore. No one here eats horses, but in Europe and elsewhere horse is still a regular part of the diet, actually more of a delicacy, and at $15 bucks a pound it rivals that of Long Island lobster.

I was in Japan a few years ago and tried to get my hands on some horse sushi because I heard it had a fantastic texture. I wasn't able to find any, but it wasn't for a lack of trying. Different cultures have different customs. Many believers of Hinduism find it appalling that people eat cows, yet we hail Bobby Van's for their burgers and steaks. So what's the big deal that people overseas eat horses?

To Americans, horses are icons of strength, beauty, and everything American. We have Ford Mustangs, Budweiser Draught Horses, Denver Broncos — what's more American than cars, beer, and football? And the horse, though eaten by Native Americans, was also an important part of their lives — both for transportation and companionship. Today, we drive cars, but the companionship of horses is still an important relationship in the equestrian life, a life celebrated in the Hamptons. Tending to horses teaches responsibility and leads to maturity. I still remember waking up at six in the morning to feed and water our horses as a child and those days stay with me, as I recall the bond I created with those animals because horses, unlike many varieties of livestock, also develop relationships with people. Like dogs,

Reagan was an old man who was conserving his energy. And among the people who spotted this much better than the American press did were the Russians. One of the Russian interpreters at Reykjavik described Reagan as a lion in winter who was lying there asleep most of the time, not paying much attention, and would occasionally open his eyes and see an antelope on the horizon and roll over and close his eyes again. And in a while open them again and now the antelope is twenty, thirty feet away, but still he rolls over and appears to go back to sleep, probably did go back to sleep, and then opens his eyes and the antelope was there, the antelope was eight feet away, and suddenly the lion's roar fill the sky and the antelope is no more. That's the way the Russians described him.

"Reagan was an idealist and a romantic. He believed you could actually bring everyone together. He was labeled The Great Communicator by the Democrats who used it as an excuse……meaning they couldn't do anything because he was magic."

The tables aren't just corporate expenses. Some tables are obtained by people or families. Say your grandson is competing and you want to secure a spot. Write out a sponsorship check and you and your family can sit down with an unobstructed view as he competes. But there are still other ways. If one stable has a lot of entries, say amounting to $10,000, they can arrange to get a table, but they still have to pay the $2000 for the table, because most of their entry fees go toward prizes and not the Hospital. And just when you thought there was no other way to secure a table there is the barter system. Say you have a hay company and strike a deal to donate all the hay to the Classic, or free advertising space at a newspaper, or do all the landscaping at no cost, then you can probably finagle a nice spot to watch the show.

But when you get your seat at the table, there are additional costs, like what to eat? Well, Robbins Wolfe is the official caterer of the VIP tent and therefore no other caterers can deliver food to your table, but that doesn't mean you have to actually have Robbins Wolfe cater your table if you don't want to. You can pick up a funnel cake at the concession stand in the main dining area or bring lunch with you, although you'll look rather odd snacking on peanut butter and jelly sandwiches while everyone else in the tent dines on five-star meals.

So, though the cost of a table seems rather expensive at first glance, if you've got a corporation looking for a little tax credit or a barn full of hay, you may be able to secure yourself a table at the Classic for next year. In the overall spectrum of Hamptons benefits, nailing down a table for seven days at $15,000 total is a much better deal than one table at $10,000 for one night. Then again it's all for a good cause so what the hell's the difference?

Who's Here

Allan Stillman
Restaurateur

By Dan Rattiner

Ordinarily when I interview somebody interesting for these "Who's Here" columns, I find that who I am talking to has had ups and downs, moments of inspiration and decision, a few dead ends and then, finally success in some way or another that has made me think they were interesting enough for a Who's Here in Dan's Papers.

Alan Stillman is another matter. He is an ordinary Joe, Brooklyn born and raised with what seemed to me no particularly unstoppable drive. And yet, from rather middle class beginnings in Brooklyn, he made a few decisions here and there, absolutely all of which worked out beyond anybody's wildest dreams. All together in his life, I guess it is fair in his life, these decisions totaled five. Not very many actually. But here he is, a man in his late sixties who looks in his late fifties, and who, in spite of himself, has just about everything a man could want. All of which fell into his lap before he was forty years old.

Alan Stillman is today one of the most successful restaurateurs in the City of New York. And he told me all about his life while we sat on the beachfront deck of a grand twenty-four acre estate in Sagaponack, something he's owned since 1977. It is worth today fifty times what he paid for it, I believe. In 1977, that was decision number three.

He pours me a drink from a bottle of Rose. I happen to know that he knows his wines. He founded the steakhouse chain Smith & Wollensky. (Number 4.) He founded Park Avenue Café in Manhattan, which his publicly traded company owns today. That was decision number 5. None of these decisions turned out to be wrong.

Alan is a jolly man with a sunburned face, a moustache and an avuncular air about him. He talks plainly, even with some surprise, about his good fortune. Even he can see this is sort of an upscale version of what happened to Forrest Gump.

"I was born and raised in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, the son of a CPA who had a small accounting firm in Wall Street. He did audits. He did taxes. I had a perfectly normal upbringing. And after high school, I went off to Bucknell where I majored in girls and minored in business. I was thinking I might want to be a CPA too."

"Any idea while in high school you might be something other than what you wound up to be?"

"No. But at Bucknell in my freshman year I played on the freshman basketball team if that helps."

Stillman is about five feet ten. But basketball played shorter back then.

"After high school, I worked for my father for a year in his Manhattan office, but I came to realize I didn't want to be an accountant. But I had had an education about business. So after a year, and with his blessing, I got a job as a salesman for a Brooklyn chemical firm called Felton that manufactured essential oils. You might not even know what essential oils are. But I can tell you they were made by chemists, and they consisted of perfumes and flavors that were needed in the cosmetics and candy business. So I made the rounds. And I got an apartment in Manhattan with three other guys."

"What was your biggest sale?" I asked.

"250 drums of raspberry."

"Not bad."

"Well, it was not that good. My roommates were all working on Wall Street making three times what I was making. But it was a job. And then, around 1964, a very interesting thing happened."

Stillman's shared apartment was in a building on 63rd Street between First and York. Every day he would take the subway home from his job in Brooklyn, and he'd stop at bar at the corner of First and York. He didn't particularly like the bar, which was called the Good Tavern. It was kind of dirty and dark, with a bullet hole in the front window. But it was on his way home.

One day, Stillman spoke to the bartender, who turned out to be the owner.

"You know, why don't you put some Tiffany Lamps all around and some sawdust on the floor, and make it inviting for some of the young people who live around here," he said. "We really don't have a place to go. And there are a lot of us."

At that particular time, this particular part of Manhattan was middle of the road and nondescript, but affordable for the pocketbooks of young singles, stewardesses, pilots and aspiring models. The owner of the Good Tavern gave Stillman an odd answer.

"I don't know," he said, surveying his empty barstools and booths. "Why don't YOU do it? For $5,000 I'd sell you the place."

Thus was Stillman's first decision made. He hastens to explain how luck played such a major role in what happened next, which was the founding of the singles bar. Undisputedly, this whole dimension of our lives was the first singular achievement of Alan Stillman. And decision #1.

I found it was a joy. Never had any problem setting up or running a restaurant. It was not complicated.

"1964 was the year that the Pill came on the market. Suddenly girls were as interested in sex as the boys were. Of course, I didn't know it at the time. I just wanted to meet girls, and I figured if I had my own place, that would do it."

Alan borrowed $5,000 from his mother. And he used $5,000, his life savings that he had in the bank. The first $5,000 paid for the place. The second $5,000 was used to fix it up.

"I knew a lot of young single people in the neighborhood," Alan said. "I gave them all paintbrushes. We painted the outside of the building blue."

"And?"

"And I decided on a name. TGIF. Thank God It's Friday."

Think of the sitcom "Cheers." Think of anything you want. Before TGIF, which quickly bloomed into a half dozen bars in Manhattan and then went national, there was no bar especially for young people. Even fast food was not around in 1964. TGIF was the first singles bar in America.

"What did you serve?" I asked, though I knew the answer.

"Twenty different kinds of hamburgers. Mixed drinks. And beer. Sunday mornings was Sunday Brunch for $5.95 with all the champagne you could drink. And that was it. I never owned a restaurant before. But I was there every day. And I found it was a joy. Never had any problem setting up or running a restaurant. It was not complicated."

Decision #2 was in the form of a person who walked by TGIF one day in 1969 on the arm of a friend of Alan Stillman.

"Here I was with a singles bar, and I meet my future wife out front."

He walked outside and talked to his friend. And then later that day and called him up and said if he ever stopped dating this girl, Donna, please let him know.

Alan Stillman courted his future wife on weekends in the Hamptons in the late 1960s. He rented houses in and around Amagansett, and was part of the big singles scene that had blossomed in that town by that time, which was the early 1970s. Although he was attached by then. And he loved it here.

"I'd work until 3 a.m. on Saturday night, and then drive out to Amagansett and sleep from 5 a.m. to 10."

The Stillmans rented Cliff Klenk's boathouse in Georgica. They rented oceanfront in Napeague.

Then came 1976, a seminal year for Alan and Donna Stillman.

"The country had gone into a recession," he said. "But we were still expanding. We opened in Little Rock, Memphis, Nashville, and with a partner, in Dallas and Houston. And we were looking to borrow money to open even more TGIFs. But we were having trouble. Then I ran into an investor named Curt Carlson. He said he wouldn't lend us any money but he'd buy the whole goddamn chain. And so we sold it to him. Actually it was Carlson who subsequently turned a 10-unit chain into a grandstand homerun. More power to him."

As for the Stillmans, they decided to buy a house in the Hamptons. They loved it out here. But first they went on an extended vacation for half a year. They lived in the South of France where both of them learned about the wine and food business. Then they came out and began to look for a place in the Hamptons.

"We had some money from the sale of Fridays. We didn't have a million dollars, but we had enough to believe that with the payout we could afford a million dollars. We had enough for a one hundred thousand dollar payment somewhere."

Two choices presented themselves. One was a house on Hook Pond in East Hampton owned by the Black family. The other was 24 oceanfront acres in Sagaponack. There were no homes on this property.

"So here is where we bought. And I have to say that for about four years, I was pretty terrified about how we were going to pay for it. The property was divided up into ten lots. I gave the building rights to one of them to the Town. I have five lots. And I sold the four remaining lots to three different people."

Today there are four different homes on the property.

Back in New York City, Stillman was walking down Third Avenue one day when he noticed the abandoned restaurant which had been up until then known as Manny Wolfe's. It had had a kitchen fire that had gotten out of control. All that remained was the wooden exterior of this small two-story building. Alongside of it, a big developer was about to start building a skyscraper.

"I made enquiries about this. I found that the little building was for sale at the right price. So I called some friends who had a lot of money and I said you put up a lot of money and I'll put up a little money and let's buy it. I think I can make something out of this. I ran a string of burger joints. How about the next step up — a steak house. I could do that."

Who's Here

Rees Jones
Golf Course Designer

By Joan Zandell

Rees Jones, the foremost golf course architect in America, divides his time between his home in Montclair, New Jersey, which was his mother's hometown, and a house on Buell Lane in East Hampton; a home he purchased while designing The Atlantic Golf Course.

"Growing up in Montclair was idyllic after WWII," said Mr. Jones in a telephone interview from his East Hampton home. "In those days, everyone was on an equal footing. Life was not as complicated and we were not exposed to as much. We belonged to a club on Lake Valhalla where we'd go swimming, boating, fishing and of course we'd play golf. I was active in sports as a young man, and I liked to play baseball as well. I won the State Championship for golf in 1957 and as a result, this fall I will be inducted into the New Jersey High School Hall of Fame. After graduating from high school, I went to Yale and then The Harvard School of Design, but I also learned a great deal from my father, Robert Trent Jones and his associate Bill Baldwin. My father put a face to the profession, he created awareness."

Rees Jones met his wife skiing in Vermont. "I had a ski house up there," he said, "and we started dating, slowly and then one day she asked me to go to a wedding at Pinehurst, and I couldn't say no, so I went and we played golf and then after the wedding I proposed." He and his wife Susan have been married for 38 years. "We have a great marriage because we look forward to seeing one another. It's important to understanding how the other person thinks. We're a very close family." Rees and Susan have two daughters, Amy and Alden. Amy is married and lives in Ossining, NY with her husband and their new eight-month-old baby, Taya. "I'm definitely into the Grandfather thing," said Jones.

Alden Jones, who is still looking for the love of her life, is a travel writer who is presently teaching at Emerson College in Massachusetts. "The house in East Hampton," Jones said, "has been instrumental in keeping us close as a family; it's where we all like to get together. Although my daughters did not work with me the way I and my brother worked with my father, I would take them along with me when they were little, and as a result they are both serious about golf."

Montauk Downs was originally built for the Israel Discount Bank, for Mort Hyman and Mort Allen. "But the clubhouse burned down," said Mr. Jones, "and as a result was sold to the State for a very low amount. I was there every week with my father's firm, I was the project designer. The greatest thrill," he continued, and I could hear him smile, "is going back to a course I cut my teeth on, and refurbishing it with all the knowledge that I've accrued.

"Bernadette Castro is a good friend. I also did Bethpage in 2002 and will do it again in 2009. What makes a golf course great is great land, wonderful views, natural rolls. Long Island has the ideal topography for golf as a result of the glacier. Technology has impacted the game by making the game more achievable. Custom made clubs now have the ability to self-correct. It's better for the game itself. At Montauk Downs I am rebunkering the course, refurbishing the remaining bunkers, flattening the tee boxes, and bringing in better sand. The course will benefit from that.

Rees Jones also has a talented brother, golf course designer Robert Trent "Bobby" Jones. They each went out on their own 32 years ago. His brother, who attended Yale as well, and then went on to Stanford University, became Vice President of Robert Jones Inc. and later assumed control of west coast operations. "We live on opposite coasts. I do more in the States, while my brother does more around the world.

"The Downs is a public golf course, perhaps the best in the nation. I plan to maintain its stature, and make it more fun. Although the course is not long enough to qualify for The Open, it will qualify for more New York State events after it is finished.

"I recently refurbished The Atlantic Golf Course. You need to upgrade because the game changes. The wedges, the drivers are better. The shafts are made of graphite so your swing speed can be faster and the ball can go farther. The balls are designed to go farther. I've had to lengthen bunkers farther out — they have no value if they are shorter. Bunkers make you play a strategy and they direct you. Shot options and strategy are what keep the golfers challenged." Mr. Jones continued, "Where you hit the previous shot determines your next shot and that is what makes it interesting."

The Downs is a public golf course, perhaps the best in the nation. I plan to maintain its stature, and make it more fun.

Despite the fact that Rees Jones is presently designing between five and six new courses as well as renovating four previous designs, he plays golf an average of 50 -60 times a year. "I don't know if I'm a good player," he says modestly, when asked about his game he replies, "I play OK."

When Jones works, he does so with four other designers and a construction crew. "You don't learn how until you get into the field and learn from the people who have done it before." Mr. Jones firm designs both public and private courses. The design challenge in the refurbishing of The Montauk

SNOOK THE THREE TOED TREE SLOTH & CO.

By Julia Nasser

"So are you ready for the master plan?" asked an effervescent Mitchell Kriegman when I met him for an early evening cocktail last week. "Ready?" I scoffed, "I already have my pen out."

For anyone who hasn't heard already, this man Kriegman, who arrived in shorts and carrying his shoes, is the mastermind behind the locally produced hit television show, "It's a Big Big World." It's a playful program that takes place in the Amazon in the largest tree on earth, airs 2700 times across the nation each week and stars Snook, a benevolent three-toed tree sloth and his eccentric crew of jungle companions.

Mitchell, who started off his career at "Saturday Night Live," is also responsible for some of my old favorites in kid's television ("Clarissa Explains It All," "Ren and Stimpy" and "Doug"), as well as Emmy Award winning programs like "Bear in the Blue House." Within the techie world, he's known for inventing a cutting edge technology known as Shadowmation, in which live bunraku style puppetry is combined with computer generated animation.

Recently, after years in New York, he moved out here and built a blue-screen production facility in an old airport hangar in Wainscott and began shooting. A year later, it's one of the top ten children's television shows in the world. PBS has signed on for a second series (40 episodes) and a post production house at Stony Brook University is in the works, where he hopes to innovate a game-engine type technology to his ever evolving Shadowmation process.

Snook

Kriegman also has plans to expand the facility in Wainscott, as well as his staff.

"We built it. We proved it. Now I just want to invite people to, well, to join the party," he said with an explosive chuckle. This was his purpose when he placed an ad in Dan's Papers recently, one of the moves that sparked our third interview this year. Hoping to appeal to wary Labor Day city dwellers reluctant to return to their cubicles, the ad calls for all writers, producers, editors and creative types to join this creative empire.

"I want to get the idea out to people in the industry, locals and perhaps some people with houses out here who don't want to get back to the city come Labor Day……to encourage them to cross that line, think outside the box……I wanted to say, hey, come join us."

During our meeting, he also discussed two new projects in the works, also to be produced in Wainscott Studios, including a musical children's series about a band of indeed rocker puppets for PBS. Kriegman will help write the music. They will be like the Monkeys," he continued. "And what a better way to bridge a generational gap than music?"

The second project, which is less concrete at this point, is a feature film targeted at teenagers, which he likened to a cross between Sin City and Heathers. At this point during our meeting, Kriegman abruptly shifted subjects. What he wanted to talk about that day was the bigger picture. Something he calls the Third Wave. This is how I understand it.

The Third Wave refers to a new era in the Hamptons community. The First Wave were the farmers, people who lived and worked off the land here and had real ties to the area. The Second Wave were affluent summer people, who built up this place, put in a ton of money each summer and leave by winter.

Now comes the Third Wave, which consists of people who have moved out here from the city with creative ideas and "sustainable, respectful, Third Wave businesses." He sees this as a way to bridge the gap between these distinct groups and hopes to use Wainscott Studios for this purpose.

Kriegman also has big plans for Snook which entail an environmental outreach programs on a local level and through PBS. This gentle sloth, whom Kriegman describes as "an aware, sensitive creature, a surfer type, the kindergarten teacher from Mendocino County," will lead an all-inclusive kids club, an outreach pro-

One of these days, someone told him during the shoot, they're going to drop the other shoe.

"This was the first time I had heard that expression. I had to have it explained to me. But I still, today, sometimes wake up in the middle of the night with this nightmare. Post-dramatic stress. Big time."

"I, on the other hand," Scheider said, "hoped the making of the movie would go on forever. We had the beach, good food and wine, good friends, great times." He turned to Spielberg. "Remember that buffet dinner at the hotel?" he grinned.

Spielberg and Scheider, going back and forth, gleefully described it as they remembered it.

The hotel was one of these huge wooden affairs with large dining rooms. They were on some long delay, caused by the shark crew's inability to get some sort of part. They went in and there was this long buffet set out for them. A gift from the film studio. So they got the food and they sat down to eat.

"I'm sitting there at this long table," Spielberg said, "and Shaw leans forward and puts his finger on a little tiny piece of food and just flicks it across the table at me. It goes splat, right on my shirt. So I flick a piece of food back at him."

In a short time, food is being flicked all around the table. And then it escalates. They go from little specks to mashed potatoes. From mashed potatoes to chocolate mousse and from there to pieces of roast beef and asparagus. Finally there were chairs and pies involved, everybody covered in everything.

"And I remember the staff came into the dining room and they just stood there in a row by the swinging kitchen doors, grinning," Scheider said.

"Remember all those debutantes?" Spielberg asked. Scheider didn't. "In the next dining room there were all these debutantes in big white dresses about to have a coming out party, and this food fight started and this chaperone comes running over to them and starts screaming at the girls everybody out everybody out, like as if the place was on fire."

"We finally ran out and all jumped into the pool," Scheider said.

"All that food flotsam floating up and around," Spielberg concluded.

One of the great miracles during all this waiting around was the development of the relationship between Shaw and Dreyfus.

"In the film, Shaw is always baiting Dreyfus," Spielberg said. "And Dreyfus doesn't back down. Shaw is this rough, tough Irishman fisherman. Dreyfus is this intellectual New York scientist half his age. And they were that way to each other in real life."

"Shaw would say to nobody in particular, I don't know why I am on this island. I should be in Sardi's. He'd turn to Dreyfus. He'd say, You know what? You're a coward. A COWARD? Dreyfus would ask. A coward. Let me see you climb that mast. And Dreyfus would take off his jacket and go over to it and the crew had to physically restrain him to keep him from trying to get up there.

"Another time, Dreyfus is walking along and he knows they are getting ready for a scene with Shaw, and he sees him sitting on a deck drinking. It's 11 a.m. He says to Shaw — you in this scene? — and Shaw says yeah, and Dreyfus picks up his drink and throws it in the water. You don't do that to a drinker. Again the crew had to run over to keep these two apart."

Well, the movie got made. And it made everybody's career. It is one of the greatest movies of all time, and often turns up on various people's short list right behind Citizen Kane. It grossed, in today's dollars, almost a billion dollars. And here it was, shown in East Hampton, having never been shown on the big screen between then and now except for one time at a film festival on the Vineyard.

And people who'd never seen it were scared half to death by it, just as the people were who saw it for the first time in 1976.

"How do you feel about seeing it again on the big screen?" somebody in the audience asked Spielberg. "Do you love it as much as we do?"

"Let me tell you," Spielberg said, "I love this film, but also I've seen Jaws naked. And there are things in it I don't want to share with you. So it's entirely different for me than it is for you."

The evening, which had begun with the garden reception at five thirty, ended now at ten thirty. And everybody stood up and gave both Scheider and Spielberg a standing ovation.

It was one of the greatest nights ever in the Hamptons, in my opinion. •

been a huge success for the town and the Town of Southampton has followed similar tax code in order to preserve property. It is pretty common knowledge that East Hampton is more aggressive on buying property for preservation purposes than Southampton. This mostly has to do (in this reporter's opinion) with the fact that many of the higher ranking elected officials for Southampton are in the development business. What's a wealthy community to do?

Should the farm be bought by the town, and I hope that it does, many are wondering what will happen to the business of the Farmers Market. The word on the street is that the Town will operate the Farmers Market and use it as a space for locals to sell their local goods. Just exactly how it will be run has not been planned, but you can be sure it will be a place for the people of Amagansett to continue to enjoy. Will coffee be there? Of course! And that's all that really matters if you think about it.

The town will buy the development rights to the farmland as well as the land that stretches behind the property, which means that they can control what gets developed on the land, or in other words, they can keep it as farmland.

The market also has some serious historical value. The house adjacent to the market was built in 1884 by Samuel S. Babcock and the farmland was originally the Nathaniel Hand farm in the 18th century. Today you can get gourmet food, coffees and specialty items as well as enjoy the outdoor benches that overlook the farm while you drink your coffee or eat your lunch. You can also smell the fresh flowers that are for sale right outside near the benches. It's just an incredible place and pretty soon, we can be confident that it is going to stay that way.

and the priced turned out to be..... well, miraculous.

When asked if the offered $10 million could be used towards a different but equally suitable location, Reverend Havrilla responded, "Where are we going to go?" citing the astronomical price of all real estate in Southampton. Also mentioning lawyers' fees and other steps that "erode a lot of money," the Reverend said, "It's deceiving to think that you'll come out of that with a total of $10 million." And I suppose asking for another miracle in the form of $100,000 for ten acres in the Hamptons would just be greedy.

Besides, the Full Gospel Church feels that its prominent presence in the community should not be interrupted. Reverend Havrilla pointed to a decrease in the number of abortions performed at Southampton Hospital and openly wondered if maybe the church's active opposition of the matter could be the cause. "Most churches, in my opinion, do not confront these issues with the energy they should," said Havrilla.

Yet many community residents may prefer to not be subject to the church's stand if it also means forgoing a stand in the supermarket checkout line. LaWall claims that the one Waldbaums supermarket in Southampton is not enough to meet the needs of the community. With no other large supermarket between Hampton Bays and Bridgehampton, there are just "too many people" and "no competition." LaWall describes current shopping conditions as "a chance to meet everyone you haven't seen in the last five years, but on the other hand, it's a very small space."

Like fitting shopping camels through the eye of a needle.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

Roads And Birthday

I turned 24 last week, and I have absolutely no idea what the hell just happened. I sat in thought and re-examined my life last Sunday, and pondered where my life is going and where the world is going. A lot of people are thinking that things are looking bad, but on my birthday, I learned from a buddy of mine about a new sports car called the Tesla that is totally sweet looking, can go as fast as a Porsche and is an all out electric vehicle. It made me feel like we were making progress. Because to be honest, the Prius looks kind of funny to me. I'd go for it since it is so fuel efficient, but that would be the main reason I'd buy it. But this Tesla is not a hybrid. It takes 3 hours to charge and can go for 250 miles between charges, plus it is fast, 0-60 in about 4 seconds. It is a slow process, but eventually, stuff like this is going to go mainstream. I believe this for two reasons. One is because I think it is true and the other is because if I don't, I get depressed.

My cell phone rang. It was my buddy Bruno.

"Dave, my car broke down. I'm at exit 63 on the LIE. I need your help, man, I'm totally stuck here."

"I'll be there, buddy, don't worry."

I went into super hero mode. Leaving East Hampton, I spent about an hour and a half on the road by myself. Now I had even more time to think, and I checked out the grass that is in the middle of the highway as I cruised along at sixty miles an hour. I got to thinking further. Who the hell cuts all of this grass on the highway? This is an absurd amount of grass. IT'S IMPOSSIBLE TO CUT ALL OF THIS!

I started to freak out because I had never thought about this before. I can't believe I'm now 24 and I still don't know how the grass gets cut on the highway. I mean think about it. It goes on and on for hundreds of miles and the grass is always cut short. It would take an army of guys on lawn mowers, even the ones that you drive, to cut this much grass in a day. I called my buddy Jim, who I used to row crew with at Northeastern and who is at Brown now, getting his Ph.D in chemical engineering. He would know.

"Hey, Dave, what's up?"

"Hey, Jim. This is going to sound really weird, but I'm driving on the highway right now and you know the grass that is in the middle of the highway?"

"Yeah."

"Well, who the hell cuts it?"

"Dude, that's a really good question."

"It's a lot of grass, man!"

"Maybe they use like a special grass that is genetically engineered to grow a certain length and then the top part dies."

"You're an idiot."

We talked about this for a long time. We came to the conclusion that there is a state funded army of men and women that are unionized and cut the grass on the highway once a week. I'd like to meet one of those guys that cut the grass. I bet they all hang out together.

I picked up Bruno and drove him back to his house in Bridgehampton. We talked about surfing almost the entire drive back. He told me to stop thinking so much. I told him I had a headache.

When I got home, I talked with my friend Kirk, who was telling me how he is now growing a handlebar mustache and that he enjoys stroking it all day. Should I grow a mustache? I'd rather grow a beard because then you don't have to shave, which is one of the worst parts about becoming an adult. A moustache would take even more effort than shaving, but it makes you look important, but also kind of weird, but I guess that is kind of the point of it. But if you think about it, it's a weird idea in itself. I mean, you go your whole life not shaving, then everybody tells you that you need to start shaving once a month when the little moustache starts at sixteen, then you need to shave every day and then one day, you think to yourself, maybe I want that moustache I had back when I was sixteen.

I told Kirk about the new electric car. He already knew about the Tesla. Progress is here, it's just a little mysterious right now, like the guys that cut the grass on the highway.

DUNES, INC., later known as SAGPOND ESTATES) presented the town with a plan to develop the site. A dead end private road would be built from Ocean Road. On the south of it there would be 23 building lots. The parcel beyond the 23 on the south side on the end, would be owned in common by the other 23 and would be a recreation area. A restriction said that there could be no vehicular access to the ocean on this lot, except for the launching of boats. As for the private Surfside Drive, it would only be for the use of the property owners in the development.

In 1987, the owners of the 23, believe it or not, lost control of this common recreation parcel by defaulting on the taxes. The County took it, and the Town bought it at auction. It could be a small beach park, with access from Surfside Drive. As for the restricted use of Surfside Drive — the Town's ownership of this one parcel makes all town residents property owners within this development.

Mr. Simpson, after buying the lot next door six years ago, built a magnificent mansion of glass and wooden decks as a second home for himself and his family. He had a clear view of anyone driving on the road to the town beach park there.

In 2000, Mr. Simpson, uninvited, erected concrete posts to prevent town residents from having Surfside Drive access to their lot. The next day, the Town Highway Department received a call from some fishermen saying somebody had erected a barrier to the town owned beach property, and later that day Town Supervisor Cannuscio called Mr. Simpson "an icon of arrogance," and ordered the Highway Department to go down there to tear it out, which they did, in the presence of the Town Supervisor and many members of the media.

Mr. Simpson, now looking out at fishermen's beach buggies again, bided his time. Then, sometime last spring, Mr. Simpson quietly made application to State Supreme Court Judge John J. J. Jones Jr. demanding that the town be prevented from using vehicles on the sand road. He argued that 1. the use of the vehicles made excessive noise and at night bright headlights shone into his home creating a bother to him and his family and friends and 2. that there was a restriction that said none of the homeowners in the subdivision could take vehicles out to the beach on this common parcel, except for the purpose of the launching of boats.

According to the Town Attorney who is now handling the case, Mr. Simpson simply left out in his application that if and when this common recreation parcel were sold, these restrictions would cease to exist. The logic of this is actually quite ingenious. No such restriction exists on all the other lots, because each is owned privately and the private owner can decide who drives or doesn't drive on his property. Thus, if this common lot gets sold, it too gets to not have this restriction. The dropping of the restriction occupies liber 5831, page 414, lines 8 to 13 of the covenant in the county ledger.

What happened after this was a bureaucratic foul-up by the town attorney's office. At the time, the town attorney was Steve Brown. And he handed the demand from Simpson over to a special attorney. But the special attorney hired by the town thought that Steve Brown was handling this particular case. In the mix up, the town failed to reply to the demand. They got an extension, but then Steve Brown had a heart attack and had to resign his post. The date to reply then passed. And Simpson was awarded a victory by default. From the town's perspective, the arrival of the boulders brought in by Simpson was a surprise. But they could not remove them because of the court order, and the boulders stayed for about a year.

The new town attorney, Garrett Swenson, applied to the judge to reopen the case and to void Mr. Simpson's right to block the town from the use of its property. And last week, Judge Jones ruled that he would not reopen the case, but that his ruling did not give Mr. Simpson the right to put an obstruction on a neighbor's property. And so the boulders have now been removed, but there is also a sign warning residents that they may still not use this sand road for vehicular access.

This partial victory does not satisfy the Town at this point. And so they are preparing an appeal to a higher court, arguing that where the interests of the residents of an entire town are at stake, the improper actions of the town attorney's office should not be allowed to prevail.

Mr. Swenson told me today that just as soon as he can get this matter before a new judge, if ever, he will show how this restriction drops away. He urged me to read the actual wording of it. And so I got a copy and here it is. See it for yourself.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages. Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #414
Back to Skool

We all got the letter from the school. A thick packet full of permission slips, disclosures and rule books. The rule book is full of what you would think is just plain common sense. When did we get to the point we have to write all this down? You can't fight, steal, curse, bully, wear revealing clothing or tee shirts with drug messages on them, you have to show up or have a good excuse, and lastly, don't say or do anything that society would agree is stupid. There, you just read the whole rule book. And don't give me that, "but what if we don't agree on the definition of stupid." If your son torches the sports equipment room, that's stupid.

I'd give list of stupid examples, but teenagers have such a long list and scope of stupidity that it could fill half the Internet. Of course it's nothing like adult stupidity, which is just teenage stupidity on steroids. I include myself in this, as I have made some Award Winning Asinine Decisions in my life. In my defense I can only say that they were creative asinine decisions that, with age, have become a constant source of amusement for me and a reminder that intelligence is in no way linked to common sense. As you read this, I bet you're thinking of a few examples of your own...

The permission slips have gotten better over time in that you can list three or four people whom the school can call if your child is sick or injured or needs a ride. It must be a little odd on an Island, though, since most of us list at least one other school mom for backup. I can just imagine all these emergency cards with the same names criss-crossing back and forth under the kids' names. God bless whoever has to keep all this straight!

The school calendar this year is terrific! Color coded and easy to figure out! Kudos to whomever did this job! I now have clear forewarning of when my son will have off from school. It will be very difficult this year to drop him off and speed away claiming that "I didn't know there was no school today." ~~Damn~~. Isn't that wonderful?

Will "Hurricane Corwin" return to her post this year? That's the big mystery... one of the school's best and most loved teachers, Jennifer Corwin, was mysteriously pulled out of the classroom last spring and assigned to duties that prevented student contact. She wasn't told why (I spoke to her myself) she was removed from teaching. Parents were outraged. At a school board meeting, many people stood up and demanded to know, what was she charged with? "We can't tell you," was the answer....ooohhh a big secret.... Our local paper did an excellent article on it. Will Jennifer return to her duties as a fantastic and flamboyant teacher? When my daughter won a summer writing scholarship to Brown University and I called her to ask how she was doing with the demands of college, she said, "Mom, it's like doing a GAP project. If these kids had had Mrs. Corwin, they wouldn't be cryin' now." Well, let's all hope.

The school menu looks very good. And the kids have a salad bar? We were lucky if a lettuce leaf showed up under the half pear for dessert. Too bad parents can't get a lunch card. As far as I know, the school cafeteria has the only salad bar on the Island. You don't suppose they serve a nice white wine with the salad bar? No, no, that would be night school.

Picture Day happens real soon after school opens. My son only wears soft clothing, i.e., anything made from fleece. Last year, I sent him, and his fleece, to school with a nice button down shirt in his backpack to wear for his school picture. Naturally, he "forgot" to put it on and I had yet another school picture of him in a sweatshirt. This year, I'll be ready. He has a new button down shirt and a real tie. He will wear this "costume" on picture day if I have come to school and dress him in the hallway myself or if I have to staple gun the shirt and tie on him before he leaves for school. Mothers don't ask much, a nice school picture, something that might look good on a milk carton, is a small price for all we endure.

The first day of school is Wednesday, September 6th, 8:05 AM. Parental celebrations will begin at 8:06 AM. The Island bars are all opening at 9 AM for the Freedom Celebration. You must sign your own permission slip to attend.

they have the cognitive skill to learn and solve problems, as well as the emotional ability to show affection. These traits alone create an ideal creature to co-exist with humans and one could experience this symbiotic relationship if they were to spend any decent amount of time with a horse. Whatever the reasons, the American public does not eat horse, but we do lose our horses to the international "restaurant trade," at a steady, if not increasing rate.

On a national level, The American Horse Slaughter Prevention Act is being put before Congress as early as September 5th, less than a week away. This act would ban the sale and transportation of horses for the preparation for human consumption in the United States, this would also prevent the horses from being transported across the border to meet the same fate. Congressman John Sweeney, of New York is leading the charge along with Congressman John Spratt, Jr. and Congressman Ed Whitfield of South Carolina and Kentucky, respectively. Several reasons cited by Sweeney and HR 503 for the ban are:

1. Horses and other equines play a vital role in the collective experience of the United States and deserve protection and compassion.

2. Horses and other equines are domestic animals that are used primarily for recreation, pleasure, and sport.

3. Unlike cows, pigs, and many other animals, horses and other equines are not raised for the purpose of being slaughtered for human consumption.

4. Individuals selling horses or other equines at auctions are seldom aware that the animals may be bought for the purpose of being slaughtered for human consumption.

Mr. Bear, ridden by Margot French, with Veronica Whitney

We should put pressure on our congressmen and women to pass HR 503. The East End of Long Island is known for its horses, revered for its scenic pastures, picturesque barns, and split rail fences. But the Hamptons are also known for their unending fundraising events from ARF to The Retreat. Yet, horse rescue for the most part has been somewhat ignored. That is, if you don't include the work being done at Amaryllis Farm Equine Rescue, on Merchant Path in Sagaponack, which has saved 31 horses destined for slaughter in the past year.

When Christine Barrett-Distefano's horse Rascal died of natural causes a little over a year ago, she began searching for a new horse. She found a website which listed horses which were in need of rescuing. There was one horse that caught her attention: a nameless, three-year-old Liverpool chestnut which had been basically ignored, left in a stall and was barely fed for the majority his life. The horse's hooves had grown to 12 inches in length, making it painful for him to stand. He was at a feedlot being plumped up until the next trailer came to take him away.

On May 15, 2005 Christine met this horse, named him "Elijah," and the rescue farm began. She had more empty stalls and decided to save as many horses as she could. In 15 months 31 horses have escaped becoming basashi or cheval burgers, but this is a labor of love and requires a great deal of help. Separated between three barns, in Southampton, Bridgehampton, and Sagaponack, the Farm has already had 15 of their horses adopted. The stories behind these rescued horses are horrific, but need to be shared.

When "Ginger" was found she was a nappy, emaciated horse that looked like she was on her last leg, and in some ways she was, but now the 23-year-old thoroughbred has filled out and is stunning. Strong and muscular, Ginger looks like she could still win a few races.

One of the more wonderful stories is that of "Nicky" or "Nick of Time" who was just a foal when he was saved. When Amaryllis Farm rescued him in December he had a broken bone in his leg, which no one seemed to have noticed at the farm where he was kept. In the past eight months he has healed nicely with the help of Veterinarian Dr. Andresen, who set the bone and treated Nicky's wounds. He shows no signs of favoring the injured leg and should grow up to be a handsome horse of 15 hands.

Without sounding melodramatic, there are 29 other stories just like these, horses with productive lives ahead of them. But the cost of caring for them is immense. Each horse eats almost $10 worth of hay a day, that's $3650 a year per horse, just in hay. These horses are beautiful, majestic creatures. Many are as gentle as can be, well-trained and perfectly suitable for riding. They need adopters and benefactors; people whose love of horses is as strong as that of the all-volunteer staff at Amaryllis Farm. Supplementing feed costs or vet bills can go a long way in providing these horses with the lives they deserve. There is a wish list on their website (www.forrascal.com) stating the different sponsorships available. For $15 a month you can be a Carrot Sponsor, for $20 a Basic Vet Sponsor, $75 a Vitamin Sponsor and so forth. If you would like to make a one time donation that is also greatly appreciated. Also to augment the funds which support these horses, the farm offers lessons in western and English styles, equestrian yoga, pony clubs, and camps which allow children to work first hand with these amazing creatures.

At the Hampton Classic last Sunday, I fell in love with "Amaryllis Heartbreaker" a four-year-old brown and white paint horse that is at the Farm's display in the Exhibition Tent. If you attend the Classic this weekend, make a trip to the tent (behind the Grand Prix stadium) to visit with Christine, the rest of the staff at Amaryllis Farm and some of the stunning animals they have saved, including the grand daughter of the only undefeated Triple Crown winner, Seattle Slew. There you make a donation to support these efforts.

If you can't make it to the Classic, you can visit their website, www.forrascal.com or give them a call at 631-537-7335 to find out about adoption or how you could support these horses.

But with so many stables in the Hamptons there have to be other open stalls. Amaryllis Farm can't be the only place with a few extra spaces. Why aren't more farms stepping forward and saving the lives of these horses — horses that were once owned by people just like you and me?

Stillman and his investor friends bought the property and began fixing it up. But in the first year they had to fend off offers from the people next door, the Cohen Brothers, who wanted the whole block for the skyscraper. But Stillman said no. They offered him more and he still said no. Finally he told them he had plans for the property, and he wouldn't sell it no matter what. And so one day they returned with another offer.

"Suppose you sell us the air rights," they said. "We could build our building four more stories higher if we had your air rights." And so Stillman sold that to them.

"We can never build up," he said to me, a twinkle in his eye.

And then came the job of naming the place. Day after day they were inside, working on the remodeling. For a while, they thought they'd call it Bannisters. But it didn't have much of a ring. Finally, crunch time approached.

"Okay, here's what we'll do," Stillman said. He got a Manhattan telephone directory and he opened it. "Wherever my finger lands, that's what we name it." Everyone agreed. And he pointed.

He looked down at his finger. It had landed on SMITH. "We can't call it that," he said, warily. "I'll try again." And the second time the finger pointed to WOLLENSKY.

"So that's how we got the name Smith & Wollensky."

This is perhaps the most famous steakhouse in the City of New York.

"I thought Smith & Wollensky was 200 years old," I said.

"Everybody thinks that. Even I think that. But it's not. We just marketed it that way. It is 29 years old."

And Smith & Wollensky, which looks like a gift box sitting out in front of this big skyscraper, was a hit right from the start. (Well, almost.)

Stillman formed a corporation. It is a public corporation today, and around the country they have opened almost a dozen Smith & Wollensky's. They market a steak sauce. And they are now planning to open a chain of Wollensky Grilles.

So that was decision #4. But Stillman was not done. Having become a celebrated restaurateur in the city, he decided that they ought to open some truly great restaurants. And thus came decision #5. The Park Avenue Café is one of them. Maloney and Porcelli is another. And Alan Stillman's son Michael, now grown, has opened a restaurant of his own in Manhattan inside the firm, called Quality Meats, between Fifth and Sixth on 58th. It's a roaring success. And more in other cities in the country are planned.

Stillman has fun. Some of his promotional ideas have been legendary. He once ordered a million dollars worth of wine shipped to one of his restaurants in a Brinks Armored Truck. On another occasion, upon learning that Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream was looking for new CEO, he suggested himself as the ideal candidate. The merged company could be called Ben Smith & Jerry Wollensky Steak & Shakes.

Perhaps his greatest marketing success, however, was in the founding of his semi-annual Wine Week promotions. These are held at Smith & Wollenskys around the country and at the most recent renewal of this event, more than 18,000 bottles of wine were served. For a number of years, when the event was just held at the Manhattan restaurant, among those who came to personally pour their wine were Robert Mondavi and Count Antinori.

Alan and Donna in the Hamptons? Their days are filled with golf, beach, parties and all other manner of relaxation. One thing it does not include is work.

"I've kept it a complete break from everything else,"

He and Donna also do a lot of traveling. They've been all over the world. And in 1985, ten years after their first extended vacation in France, they returned to rent for a season in Cap Ferret.

"With all your travels," I asked, what's your favorite place?"

Stillman hesitated. "My wife, I would say, would choose the South of France. Me? Three months, right here. And that's all I need."

Stillman is currently working on a book titled Madness: So You Always Wanted to Open a Restaurant. •

gram in schools, and a pilot program to educate kids about the environment in simple ways. Snook will also host a special on Earth Day with a live tour through our community, and work with local forward thinking environmental organizations.

"There's no Smokey The Bear character around today when we need him most. And who would be better to fill this spot than a slow-thinking sloth?

"I imagine it like An Inconvenient Truth for children, a way to teach basic environmental ideas……Non-political and positive stuff that no one's going to argue with. Simple stuff that's about easy change rather than sacrifice."

Besides this, Kriegman plans to add two new characters to the crew of "Big Big World," a polar bear and a whale, thus adding the Arctic region to his now jungle-based setting.

"Little by little we're going to build the whole world." Kriegman told me.

"I would expect no less, " I answered.

"I work backwards," Kriegman said of his process. "It's kind of like reverse engineering. My process is finding the problems I have solutions for. Starting with the ideal, then finding the needs that they would serve…… I find a little niche, I make a home and then I expand it……Unconventional ideas are awarded at the fringes and applied to the center."

And that is surely what he is doing — building this ever expanding creative empire and as I expected, it's going to be phenomenal. So, in a year or so, perhaps a few months, you'll likely hear from me again. Because there's something about the Kriegman brain that keeps me interested. "If I could see the lines, I would color inside them," he said later.

At this point, the sunny late August afternoon had shifted into a chilly evening, and a fall breeze settled in. So after we jabbed a bit and he wavered between lighthearted small talk and his philosophical ruminations, we began to pack up.

"That all sound great," I said as we wrapped up our meeting, "now I just have one more question……"

"Sure," he said, eager to tell me about his plans for a new invention, or starting a restaurant, or a character he dreamed up while I was in the restroom.

"What if you run out of ideas?" I ask.

Kriegman looked out over the water, a bit pensive, then snapped his attention back towards me with a mischievous grin.

"That won't ever happen. It's my saving grace."

Whispers

With Gina Glickman

"FIRST TIME IS A CHARM"

Hollywood heavies hit the Hamptons at a recent premiere screening of HOLLYWOODLAND at the UA Southampton Cinema. The film explores the real-life, mysterious death of "Superman," actor George Reeves, played by Ben Affleck. Also starring in the film are Diane Lane and Adrien Brody, who both co-hosted the East End screening. It was an evening of "first times" for the cast, but that didn't seem to slow anyone down. According to

Patti LaBelle and Gina Glickman

Diane Lane, "You would never know Allen Coulter is a first-time director. He is so overqualified. This is a wonderful debut. I'm so grateful to have been in his first film. And, this is my first time flying in a helicopter to the Hamptons!" It is certainly not Brody's first time on the big screen, but it is the first time he plays the role of a father and Adrien admitted, "This is a first for me. I have a son in the film." Post-screening, the power crowd, including Barbara Walters, James Lipton, Rosanna Scotto, Marty Richards, Calvin Klein, Chuck and Ellen Scarborough, Michael Gelman, Joan Ganz Cooney, Pete Peterson, Carey Lowell. Clarissa Bronfman, Glen Williamson, Cornelia Guest, Arianna Huffington, Al Taubman, Nachos Figueras and Robert Wilson caravanned over to Savanna's restaurant for a sit-down dinner and a champagne toast to the film's success, which hits a theater near you, September 8th.

This past Saturday, celebrity photographer Patrick McMullan celebrated his birthday at The Jaguar Cain Estate hosted by designer Nicole Miller and Asian pop star Sun, who performed her U.S. debut single, "Gone" and has

GEORGE'S UNBIASED HOW TO UNWIND TIP #1.

You moved out to the Hamptons to unwind.
To escape the pressure; the noise; the pace; the traffic.
Now, if you could only convince the kids to relax a little more and bring out the grandchildren more often...
Everything would be perfect.
You want them to relax? Get a pool.
A Kazdin Pool, of course.

We've been designing, building and maintaining both gunite and vinyl pools here for over 30 years.
That's a long time and a lot of pools.
And a lot of awards.
And a lot of happy, relaxed people.
We can't help you get the kids out here more often, but we sure can help make their stay more relaxing.

A Unique Concept That Will Revolutionize Dental Implant Treatment

HAVE YOU LOST OR ARE YOU LOSING YOUR TEETH?

If so, you may be a candidate for Dental Implants.

At the offices of Dr. Howard A. Popper we have placed thousands of implants since 1985, including Long Island's FIRST "Teeth in an Hour" THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR EXPERIENCE.

Your life can be dramatically transformed with the immediate load-immediate function-immediate smile procedure utilizing THE NEW NOBEL GUIDE FOR COMPUTER-GUIDED, minimally invasive, flapless, pain free implant surgery. Dental implants improve appearance, comfort, speech, confidence, self-esteem and maintain your bone for a lifetime. Dental implants contribute to better overall health and improve quality of life for patients.

GIVE YOURSELF THE GIFT OF A PERMANENT SMILE "NOW"

Teeth in an Hour, the latest concept in high-tech dentistry. Sophisticated 3-D radiology creates precise imaging of patient's jaw, and robotic technology in Sweden fabricates the permanent restoration which is placed with the Branemark System Implants - in the space of one hour.

The Branemark Novum System™ can provide patients with implants and permanent teeth all in one day, AND THE NEW-ALL-ON-4 can provide low-cost acrylic bridges in one day.

Implants can secure dentures, restore chewing and enjoyment of food, and impede progressive jawbone loss. No more wobbling dentures, irritated gums, gooey adhesives and filed down teeth for bridgework. Single teeth to full-mouth treatment, utilizing NOBEL PERFECT implants for optimum esthetics.

FIXED TEETH IN ONE DAY!

facial structure collapse | a perfect smile!

Without good periodontal health, there can not be good general health. Periodontal disease (commonly known as gum disease) can affect the state of your whole body. Over the past few years, studies have shown a definitive link between your oral health and your general health, including heart disease and diabetes.

Traditional periodontal and implant therapy available with intravenous sedation, administered by a certified anesthesiologist.

Late night the crew migrated over to Cain Southampton Club to join Jared Leto, Noah Tepperberg, and you guessed it, more models. Meanwhile, back in NYC, at around 3 a.m., Cain owner Jamie Mulholland and wife JoJo welcomed a beautiful baby boy into the Cain clan, weighing 8.3 pounds and appropriately named Ocean.

Just west of the Cain Casa, in Quogue on Dune Road, the rich and fabulous gathered at the ocean-front estate of Jill and Cliff Viner for the 1st Annual "Evening Under the Stars" which raised more than $100k benefiting The Diabetes Research Institute. Thanks to PR guru Shelly Clark of Lou Hammond & Associates, event extraordinaire extras Barton G and Richard Blais, hundreds of VIPS including guests Jay S. Skyler, M.D., Risa and Jeff Pulver, Rose and Donald Billings, Regina Policastro, Beatrice Clancy, Sara Gayer, Nicole B. Brewer and Melissa Palma, feasted on nitrogen-fueled ice cream and sugar-free desserts while experiencing the incomparable Patti LaBelle, who performed with the help of Damascene Pierre Paul, Debra Henry, and Mary Griffin, who performed some of La Belle's classic hits, "On my Own," and "New Attitude." During "Lady Marmalade," Patti randomly plucked two party-goers from the audience and unexpectedly snatched up her "ex" publicist of twenty years, Ed Callaghan. It took LaBelle a few verses until she realized the coincidence and then suddenly the two embraced and had a very public, emotional reunion. When I asked LaBelle who her musical inspirations are, she laughed, "I don't have any!" Patti starts touring late September to promote her upcoming Gospel album which hits stores mid-October.

Sad but true, this Holiday weekend marks the end of this summer's social season, but there is still a tremendous amount of celebrating to do. This Sunday, post-Grand-Prix at the Hampton Classic, the Hampton elite will clown around in costume at Chris Del Gatto and Fabiola Beracasa's end of the summer Circus Bash, and Fonzworth Bentley is returning to Cain Southampton with DJ Cassidy, to perform from his upcoming album.

Until next week-Life is short, you only live once, so party on!

raised over $117,000 for a basket of six local charities including Action Against Hunger, the East Hampton Community Council, the Greater East Hampton Education Foundation, Project Most, the Kendall Madison Foundation and East Hampton Meals on Wheels. People were invited to come at 5:30 p.m. to a fenced in pasture that is in back of the Gardiner home on James Lane across from Town Pond. And here, they would find some portable bleachers, a center area for VIPs to sit in folding chairs, a runway for a fashion show and plenty of food and drink. All together, about 700 people attended.

The Beach Boys, featuring lead singer Mike Love and his backup Bruce Johnson and several others (Brian Wilson, as you know, has passed on) came on at 6:30 and played a set that accompanied a fashion show. As they played "Daddy Took My T-Bird Away" and "California Girls" and some other favorites, a total of 15 professional models, all slender and beautiful, marched down the runway in front of them showing off the bikinis, cover-ups and clothes of designer Jacqueline Love. Jacqueline is the wife of Mike Love.

The crowd absolutely loved it. They cheered, they stood up and swayed to the music, they danced in the aisle, and when the show ended after half an hour and the Beach Boys continued after a short break, many of them accepted the invitation of the Beach Boys to come up on stage and dance in their midst while they played. It was awesome.

And then the Beach Boys went off and came back to do an encore, and then another encore, and then they went off and onto the stage came my son Gabriel Rattiner on guitar, Dave Berg on drums, Ryan Duff on bass and lead singer Ashley Gardiner, who happens to be the daughter of the host and hostess. And the crowd went crazy for them too as they quickly launched into the No Doubt favorite "Underneath it All." A few of the spectators, who had gotten up to leave, now returned and sat back down in their seats. This they didn't want to miss either.

These kids, all East Hampton born and raised, played like polished musicians. Ashley has a haunting, wonderful windsong sort of voice, and the melodic No Doubt songs all came out from the band one by one and wafted over the crowd. At the end of each one, the crowd stood up and cheered with their hands in the air, swayed to the beat, danced in the aisle, and, at the invitation of the band members, came up both onto the fashion show runway and onstage to share the time with this wonderful local band For Sure. It was a one-of-a-kind, terrific experience for these performers.

At the present time, I am trying to get a video DVD of this performance. I didn't have a camera with me. Anybody out there have one? I'd pay mightily for a copy.

Downs is that it accommodates all types of golfers, at all levels, from beginners to advanced. "I designed Bethpage Black," said Mr. Jones, "and there, as only one course out of four, found it extremely demanding. That course is the only course where Tiger Woods won with a single digit under par. But here, [The Downs] you have to put everything in one course."

A true fan of the East End, Mr. Jones feels that "the East End has the best combination of courses; Montauk, The Atlantic, The Bridge, Shinnecock Hills and National Golf Links. This is a golf Mecca," he says, "the land is so spectacular and it is the place where architects have put their hearts and souls into their designs. The Bridge has such spectacular views! It's an escape from the travails of life. You go out there and you forget your troubles. All I can say is, the people who play Montauk are very lucky."

Amen. And have a good game.

Twenty-One Years Ago
"TV Crew Ends Shooting Here"
June 17, 1983

The TV series The Hamptons did five days of shooting in East Hampton last week, and headed off for some further scenes – to be shot upstate – and several weeks of editing. The series will premiere during the last week of July on a Wednesday at 9 p.m. on ABC. It will be seen nationwide and is initially scheduled for five weeks as a summer replacement show.

This is about the twentieth film made in the Hamptons in the last couple of years as reported to this newspaper. Death Trap, starring Christopher Reeves, was filmed here two summers ago. Woody Allen made Interiors and parts of several other films here. One can go back all the way to the early days of filming when Arabian desert scenes were shot in the vast wastelands of Napeague, complete with camels and an artificial oasis. The Hamptons, so beautiful, has long been a favorite location for filmmakers.

It is certainly hard to argue that filming in the Hamptons can bring anything but good to the area. Films call attention to the Hamptons, enhancing our already fine reputation. Filmmakers generally show off the natural beauty of our area. And finally the very act of filming is a shot in the arm to the economy. There were, in the case of "The Hamptons," a crew of seventy-five mouths to feed, seventy-five bodies to put up for a week or more.

It seems odd, therefore, that none of our Towns or Villages have created any sort of policy about filming or any sort of administrative body to deal with filming. Should filming in public places be allowed? Encouraged? Should the town fathers be involved? New York City, for example, totally discouraged filming in the streets from about 1945 to 1970. It was only under Mayor Lindsay's regime that this policy was reversed. Some truly great films have since been able to be made in New York City again. And the police help this to happen with the least possible disruption.

If Towns or Villages wish to encourage filming in the Hamptons, then they could set up some sort of coordinating committee that could deal with such problems as housing, feeding and policing of filming sites so as to coordinate them with the general flow of the community.

Suffolk County has such a movie board of volunteer members which meets, I am told, on an infrequent basis. Perhaps things could be modeled on this basis. – Dan Rattiner

Sixteen Years Ago
"No Frank Sinatra"
June 17, 1988

A rental that singer Frank Sinatra had made on Dune Road has fallen through according to those close to the situation. The house was oceanfront in Southampton, cost $100,000 to rent and was for the month of August.

Agents for Sinatra had made the rental late winter through Sotheby's Agency. And the idea was that hedgerows would be planted to make the house more private. Well, hedgerows have been planted but they are not tall enough to give the man the privacy from the street he needs. Sotheby's won't acknowledge it, but the other brokers say the house is back on the market.

Personally, I'd like to offer my house to Mr. Sinatra for August this summer. I'd charge just $90,000 and I'd bring in a whole forest of big cedars if that's what he wanted. Of course, he'd have to put up with the six of us huddled in the basement for the month. I wonder if he hums in the shower? – Dan Rattiner

Eleven Years Ago
"Wiped Out"
April 16, 1993

High tides washed out the access road to the Shinnecock Inlet commercial dock in Hampton Bays over the weekend. As of this writing, the road is closed off by police barriers and the fishermen who run the twenty fishing boats out of the slips there have no way of getting supplies in or out of their vessels.

The road itself, which has been occasionally covered by sand in the past, is now a mass of jagged pieces of asphalt extending almost a half a mile. The damage over the weekend cut the power lines to the Shinnecock fishing co-operative there and also to the Coast Guard's automated light which briefly went out until an emergency generator took over.

Authorities have been worried about this situation for some time, since the two big winter storms virtually wiped out a ten-foot high line of sand dunes that stretched to the south of the road, protecting it from the sea. In fact, there was a meeting this Friday, at which Town, County, State, Federal and private citizens were to discuss with the Town Supervisor what should be done to restore the dunes. Now this meeting is far more serious. It is scheduled for 1 p.m., April 16.

The twenty fishermen and their crews who work out of the million-dollar pier built on the south side of the peninsula are making alternate arrangements until the situation can be restored. Some are trying to bring their catch into Montauk, others to Point Judith, Rhode Island. Unless something is done soon, the entire fishing fleet will permanently relocate resulting in an economic hardship and the end of this community.

A dredge that has been working at the Jones Inlet as part of an Army Corps of Engineers project has already been reassigned and will begin working restoring the dune Monday. Restoring the road is another matter.

The problem seems to have come about because of the construction of the stone jetties keeping open the inlet. In Westhampton Beach, stone jetties caused the scouring of the beaches and a loss of sand to the west of the last jetty, including the disastrous loss of hundreds of summer homes that have fallen into the sea. This weekend, in fact, two more collapsed and fell. Here, twelve miles away, stone jetties are causing the same sort of scouring to the west of the inlet. But the stone jetties are necessary to keep the inlet open. There seems to be no simple solution. But the construction of a series of groins, growing shorter as they are built a mile or so to the west, might provide the answer.

– Dan Rattiner

MARTIN SHORT: FAME BECOMES ME

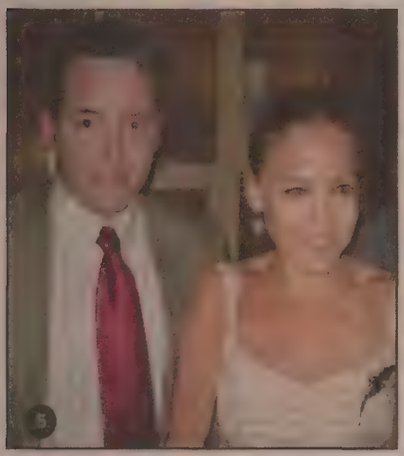
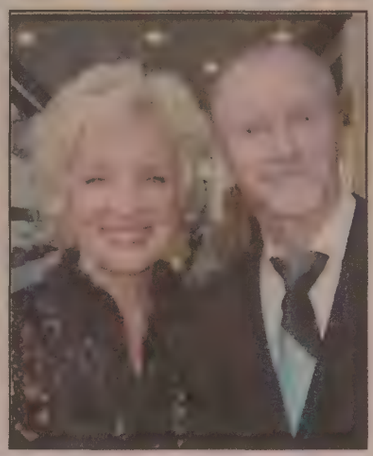
Famous friends and fans packed Broadway's Jacobs Theatre for the opening night of Martin Short:Fame Becomes Me to watch the zany comedian morph into a series of hilarious characters during his comedy musical revue billed as a one man show that actually isn't. I spotted quite a few Hampton celebrities at Tavern on the Green, where the lively after party was held.





1. Martin Short, Playwright Tricia Walsh Smith 2. Billy Crystal, Philip Smith (President of The Shubert Organization) 3. Nathan Lane, Jerry Seinfeld 4. The Eagle Has Landed

The Story Of The Coast Guard Barque Eagle That Visited Greenport

By TJ Clemente

The town of Greenport has had so many special vessels stop by for a visit over the years. Being a major port on the North Fork, so close to the Atlantic Ocean, makes it both a safe haven and a port of desire for many of the world's ocean, going sailboats. This last week the Coast Guard barque Eagle visited Greenport again. Cutting through a very dense fog the tall ship appeared out of Gardiners Bay, slipping into port with a haunting presence. Twenty passengers had gone out in a Coast Guard skiff to guide her in and to enjoy a few moments aboard the legendary ship. Joining the Captain of the Eagle, Chris Sinnet, on the bridge was former town supervisor Josh Horton, who helped steer the Eagle into its spot at the new Mitchell Park Marina. Actually Mr. Horton was invited to stay aboard and join the Eagle and its crew on its trip to Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Bringing a barque the size of the Eagle takes a crew of six to eight cadets just to man the wheel that turns the ship. It takes that much brute strength.

Some facts about the Eagle. Her length is 295 feet, roughly a football field long. The maximum speed under sail is 16 knots. Her range is listed as 5450 miles.

The three-masted sailing barque was commissioned by the Coast Guard into service May 15, 1946. The Eagle has 21,350 square feet of sail. She is one of five training barques in the world.

Her sister ships are Mircea of Romania, Sagres II of Portugal, Gorch Foch of Germany and Tovarich of Russia. The Eagle was built in the Blohm and Voss shipyard in Hamburg, Germany and was taken as a war prize from Germany after World War II. When in training, the Eagle has around a crew of 155, counting cadets aboard. It is not easy managing over 20,000 square feet of sail and 6 miles of rigging. The Coast Guard believes that this training teaches cadets the basics of salt-water sea life. Over 200 lines must be maneuvered when sailing the Eagle. Her hull is made of steel 4/10s of an inch thick. The weather decks are three-inch thick teak over steel.

While the ship was in Greenport, many stopped just to look at this mighty vessel, the largest of its type in US service. It is in fact America's only active square-rigger in any service. One can only think back to yesteryear when smaller but equally magnificent whaling vessels entered Greenport Harbor. Eagle's last visit to Greenport was in 2001 before the new Mitchell Marina was completed. It had to be anchored in the bay and the Coast Guard ran ferries out to it for the visitors. These days the Eagle has a permanent crew of 55, along with 99 cadets from the Academy in New London, CT.

While the Eagle was docked at Mitchell Marina, guests and visitors walked up and came aboard. Docking the massive barque took huge efforts, moving very large rope lines to very large cleats. The Eagle came in to port under motor power.

Family members and guests were very thrilled to go aboard this vessel. It took thirty minutes to pull down the ladder to bring them aboard.

Having a wonderful experience like watching Eagle approach Greenport is just part of the Greenport North Fork experience. With our toes on the sea and ocean at our doorsteps the royal visits of the great yachts never end. Greenport is so very rich in tradition and history,. The people of Greenport have witnessed so much history from such a great vantage point and understand the responsibility of keeping Greenport special.

So Many Ways To Cook A Lobster

All Right North Forkers, Get Out Your Pots!

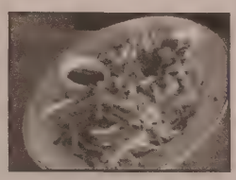
By Christine Edwards

Eating lobster is such a quintessential summer tradition on the North Fork and last week we gave you a little history of how they came to be such a large economic force here. This week, we'll tell you how to cook 'em! Labor Day is here and lobster becomes a perfect way to end the season. I remember the very first time I had lobster, last year at the end of the summer before I went back to school. I was with a bunch of great friends from Dan's Papers, including the editor of this newspaper. Of course, being that it was my first time having lobster, I was clueless about how to go about eating it. Everyone at the table had their own method of cracking and handling lobster, to a point where it was quite confusing, and someone else just took care of it for me.

In much the same way, there are tons of different ways to cook a lobster. Steam it, grill it, broil it, boil it, stuff it, make a salad out of it.....the list goes on. The most basic methods, and the ones that amateurs should start with, are boiling and steaming.

Before you start, you'll need to realize that cooking a lobster is not really for the fainthearted. You will have to actively kill the lobster, though the "screams" commonly heard when the lobsters are placed in the boiling water is actually just air escaping the shell as it expands in the high temperatures. However, if you are particularly squeamish about this part of the process, research has shown that placing the lobsters in the fridge for a few minutes before cooking numbs them and appears to result in less suffering.

To boil lobsters, you will need approximately 2 1/2 quarts of water for each lobster, and about 1 tablespoon of salt for each quart. The amount of salt is fairly variable; some cooks advise using about 2 tablespoons per quart, and many actually use seawater for the best flavoring. Pour the water into a large pot, and bring rapidly to a boil. Once the water is boiling, drop the lobsters one by one head-first into the water. Then bring the water back to a boil, and cook anywhere between 12-20 minutes, depending on the size. A good way to gauge when the lobsters are done is to test the antennae. If they come out easily, the lobster is ready.



Steaming a lobster is a similar process, only it involves placing a steamer pot or basket above the boiling water. Make sure that your steamer has an airtight seal, or it won't work too well. Cooking lobsters this way takes a few minutes less, as the steam is hotter than the water.

Grilling and broiling lobsters are less common methods, likely due to the fact that you have to kill the lobsters with a knife before preparing them. Unfortunately, lobsters need to be as fresh as possible when you cook them, so buying them already dead is not an option. Once you have done this, take the lobster and place the claws still encased in the cracked shell on the hotter part of the grill. Next, salt and pepper the inside open half of the lobster and grill it for 2-3 minutes. Turn over the body and claws and grill for another 4 minutes.

To broil a lobster, you'll be completing the same basic steps. Prepare in the same manner as above and place the lobster at least 8 inches from the flame in a shallow fry or sautéé pan and begin with the cut side down for 3-4 minutes. Once the shell's color has changed to a bright red, turn it over, reapply butter and finish for another 3 minutes. If cooking in an oven, the temperature would be 425 degrees. These and more ideas for cooking lobster can be found at www.cooking-lobster.com.

And as a tribute to one of Montauk's favorite landmarks, here is a recipe for lobster rolls, courtesy of epicurious.com:

Lobster Rolls

8 ounces cooked lobster meat, torn into bite-size pieces

3 tablespoons mayonnaise

1 tablespoon butter, room temperature

2 hot dog rolls

1/2 head of butter lettuce, thinly sliced

Combine lobster meat and mayonnaise in medium bowl. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Butter outside surfaces of hot dog rolls. Heat medium skillet over medium-high heat. Place rolls, 1 buttered side down, in skillet; cook until browned slightly, about 2 minutes per side. Open rolls. Fill with lettuce, then lobster mixture, and serve. Makes 2 servings.

The Old Mill Inn

5775 West Mill Road
Mattituck
631-298-8090

By Roy Bradbrook

Even though the rain was teeming down, the ride along Cox Neck Road down to the Old Mill Inn on Mattituck Inlet was beautiful. On entering this historic old building, you immediately feel a sense of warmth from the welcoming fire, candlelit comfy surroundings and the staff. Over the time we have been reviewing restaurants we have been privileged to meet many fascinating people with all kinds of backgrounds, but this time it really was something very different, for co-owner Elaine Lafferty has a journalistic background that is hard to equal. Telling it would require another article and that's a thought for the future. Suffice it to say, her resume goes from writing for Time magazine in L.A., to the Irish Times in Dublin, then to being a war correspondent in Bosnia, Pakistan and Afghanistan and after that editor in chief of Ms. Magazine and that's only part of the story!

Elaine has a house on Shelter Island and knew of the Old Mill Inn and when she found out it was for sale, she teamed up with four other long time friends. These included Greta van Susteren of Fox News TV, Barbara Lane, a writer, Barbara Pepe, a TV executive and John Coale, a chef turned lawyer, who is married to Greta, to purchase the Inn and the deal was completed this July 4th weekend. Elaine is now resident full time running the Inn and she and chef Stanley Madr have instituted a firm policy of using the best of local fish shellfish and vegetables in their dishes. The lobsters come from the lobsterman across the inlet, the fish, from local boats, the vegetables from farms up the lane and the corn is from Harbes Farms.

The dining room is light and attractive and has great water views and there is a deck, which really is over the water. The scenery is incredibly tranquil and beautiful and the sunsets are said to be spectacular. The bar area is very atmospheric and comfortable

We had no sun or sunset but we did start with some clam dishes that radiated freshness. Clams on the half shell needed no lemon or sauce to enhance their sea fresh taste. Clams Berclaz with butter and bacon and baked clams were also very tasty but nothing in my estimation can ever top clams au naturel. We also indulged in a bowl of mussels, simmered in a fragrant white wine based sauce and served with garlic toast points. These were delicious and every thing mussels should be.

From the daily special list we chose the simple sounding tomato salad and were we glad that we did! This was a salad of simple elegance made from all shapes and sizes of ripe local heirloom tomatoes accompanied by some very thinly sliced red onion and topped with just enough goat cheese to blend perfectly with the tomatoes that had that wonderful old fashioned tomato taste. The salad was dressed with a light herb vinaigrette and the total balance was perfect. I would be the first to nominate this for 'Salad of the Year'. It should be a fixture on their menu as long as tomatoes of the right quality are available, as should the corn pudding (not yet on the menu) that Stanley wanted us to taste. This was no pudding; it deserved to be designated 'soufflé' or 'brulee' because its superb light creamy texture and concentration of fresh corn tastes and aromas made this not a simple vegetable accompaniment to an entrée but a dish in its own right, worthy of feature status as an appetizer.

For our main course, we chose rack of lamb and roast duck. Both dishes arrived cooked exactly as ordered. The lamb was succulent; the duck was fresh tasting and complemented by a great tasting plum sauce. The accompanying corn, French fries and rice were simple and again perfect. Finally we managed a taste of the Holy Moses cheesecake and key lime pie but the highlight was a gorgeous peach crisp made in-house by pastry chef Maureen Rezlak.

Appetizers range from $6.95 to $10.95; Main courses from $18.95 to $27.95 (they include soup or salad); desserts are $7. There is a short wine list sensibly priced, featuring Long Island wines. They are open for lunch and dinner every day except Tuesday and will be open year round.

The Old Mill Inn really is a great destination in all weathers and in all seasons. Under its new ownership the policy of using only fresh produce is producing food of excellent quality and value. The Inn itself is a part of the history not only of Long Island but also of the growth of a new young country – the history is detailed on their website www.theoldmillinn.net and is fascinating to read before you visit to enjoy the food, and the food, based on our visit, is very enjoyable.

Summer Jobs Coming To An End

Selling Ice Cream And Waiting Tables, The North Fork Youth Work Hard

By Phyllis Lombardi

It will happen this September as it does every year. English teachers all over the North Fork will distribute white, lined paper to classes full of students who, for a week or so, are happy to be back in school.

"Write about what you did this summer," is the direction given by each teacher. "And show how your summer experiences will help you in school this year." Teach is apparently unaffected by student sighs of resignation and eyes rolled every which way.

Well, this year we got a jump on those teachers. In recognition of Labor Day, we talked with high school students and '06 high school graduates as they worked their North Fork jobs. We asked them the teacher questions. Responses were funny, poignant, and thoughtful. So much so you may envy the teacher the joy to be found in a classroom.

This summer on the North Fork, teens cooked and served in our restaurants, clerked in our stores, tutored our young children, fished our bays, farmed our fields. They worked side by side with adults, learned from them, and assuredly taught them a thing or two.

My first stop, as it often is on a hot end-of-summer day, was at Magic Fountain ice cream shop in Mattituck. I knew I'd find several hard-scooping teens inside. But there, outside, was Julieann Poulmentis. Julieann, who graduated from Mattituck High School in June, is usually running from chocolate to vanilla inside the store. But today she had a large brush in hand and was repainting a faded banana split mural that has long graced the eastern wall of Magic Fountain.

Buckets of red, yellow, white and brown paint were at Julieann's feet while specks of the same colors decorated her black T-shirt. Appropriately, Julieann will major in art when she starts college at the University of Rhode Island this September.

Julieann, whose summer work-week is sometimes more than 50 hours, says she's "learned how to juggle school and work." She plans on getting a job in Rhode Island and doing some "juggling" while in college. Julieann's brother, John, a junior at Mattituck High School, is working in construction this summer while her 12-year old sister Katharine, baby-sits neighborhood children. What a family!

Out in Greenport you'll find another hardworking family at Skippers Restaurant. Michael Volinski and his mom, East Marion residents, are employed at the restaurant. This September finds Michael a junior at Greenport High School. Like most guys, he's interested in food. But Michael's interest extends beyond eating. He's considering culinary school after graduation and when he sets to work in the white shirt and black pants Skippers requires, you know he's found the recipe for success.

Michael has helped prepare dinners for groups meeting at Saint Patrick Church in Southold. He's peeled bushels of potatoes, cooked vegetables, tossed salad. And then served his efforts to appreciative North Forkers. At home, Michael is devoted to dessert. I'm hoping for a large piece of his renowned apple crisp. Thanks, Michael.

Finally, Esvin Secaida. A junior at Mattituck High School, he's worked for several summers, and on winter weekends, at Cutchogue Hardware. Esvin came to the North Fork from Guatemala when he was three years old. This September brings a star spangled banner day into his life. In this glorious, golden month, Esvin embraces United States citizenship. The North Fork congratulates you, Esvin.

That said, we see Esvin stocking shelves, helping customers, ringing up sales at Cutchogue Hardware. Esvin said he first walked into the store "not knowing anything."

That was a few years ago. Now, "slowly, slowly, in time," he said he's learning so much about the hardware business, especially from the store's owner, Bob Molchan.

At the moment, Esvin's grandparents are visiting from Guatemala. And Grandma is cooking some family favorites. I asked Esvin if his parents are having a big party for grandma and grandpa before they return home.

"No," said Esvin, "my parents celebrate my grandparents every day they're here." That's exactly what the young man said.

Julieann, Michael, Esvin, and all our young people – we celebrate you.

You've got the dream.
We've got the money.

Stolen Bench? What?!

Some Crimes You Just Can't Let Go On The North Fork

By Phyllis Lombardi

Crime on the North Fork? You bet. Just listen to this from the police column in a recent issue of a North Fork newspaper.

"A park bench was overturned and damaged at Veterans Memorial Park in Mattituck." True, a few other breaches of law were reported, but this park bench thing got to me. Maybe because this time of year most North Forkers would like to find a bench and just sit. The kids are back in school, city cousins have gone back to their apartments, and the weather's just right. Perfect, really, for claiming a bench and relaxing. Perhaps reading a copy of Dan's Papers.

I wonder. How many benches are there on the North Fork? Jim McMahon at Southold Town Department of Public Works couldn't give me an exact number. I understand why. Benches, said Jim, are installed all over the place by just about everyone – from Riverhead and Southold towns, to the hamlets, to park districts, to the New York State Department of Transportation, to individual business owners. With all these benches, every North Fork derriere should be able to find repose.

My mission became clear. A bench inventory. An inventory revealing that many of the new benches on Main Road from Riverhead to Orient were placed there after major road work was completed last year. Thank you, DOT. Jim McMahon added that a good number of benches in Southold town were made by a Department of Public Works employee. More economical than purchasing benches, Jim said. Me? I want to believe they were made with love. And to that employee goes the gratitude of foot-sore North Forkers.

In truth, the benches I was most anxious to search out were those a bit off the beaten track. Benches you would not see as you shopped along Main Road or traveled Route 48 on the way to the ferry at Orient Point.

And indeed, at Orient Beach State Park is where bench-day should begin. Where the dark of the night meets the light of the day. Come to the park early and with the rest of the world, wait for sunrise. Bring a lightweight jacket, find a bench, and settle in. Listen to the music of wind and water. You and your bench are about as far east as you can go except for a few benches along the New England coast.

While this next bench may not offer such a dramatic setting, it is most welcome as the centerpiece of a lovely garden in what was, until last year, an unlovely spot.

This scruffy patch of land at the northern end of Pequash Avenue in Cutchogue was not visible to drivers on Main Road but if you drove down Pequash the scraggly weeds waved a sad welcome.

All that changed when Rich Bozsnyak and the crew at Rich's Quality Auto Body got to work. The shop is on the corner of Pequash and Main so it was easy to lug shovels, rakes, fertilizer and plants to the patch in question. Not so easy was digging, raking, planting, maintaining.

Now there is a welcoming committee of holly bushes, hydrangeas, impatiens, shade trees, and a bench. Rich says he and the crew have received many compliments from local residents who appreciate a business that makes things better – just because.

You'll have to drive to Riverhead to discover these next benches. They're not on Main Street or overlooking the Peconic River, but rather in a small park in an unlikely place – the intersection of Osborn Avenue and Middle Road. Ray Coyne of Riverhead's Parks and Recreation Department said that despite its location, the park in known as Horton Avenue Park. Find here a basketball court, picnic tables, oak and maple trees, a bit of a lake (when it rains) and benches. The grass is cut but there are no showplace flowerbeds. This is simply a spot that says "slow down" so close to Route 58. Good advice.

And so back to the original crime. I don't know whether the police have made an arrest in the overturned-bench case. I hope they have.

For punishment and possible rehabilitation? Let me suggest something Dante-esque.

Choose a hot summer day, strap a knapsack on the bench-buster's back and have him walk from Riverhead to Mattituck. In heavy boots. An occasional sip of water, yes – but absolutely no bench-sitting along the way.

The Second Annual Great Bordeaux Wine Tasting

The Results Are In And Local Wines Shone. But Is This The Whole Story? Not Yet.

By Susan Whitney Simm

"The scene is a wine shop. Customer: 'I'm afraid I didn't think much of that Cabernet you sold me.' Assistant: 'Parker gave it a 90.' Customer: 'I'll take a dozen.'"

The excerpt above is from A Life Uncorked, English wine writer Hugh Johnson's vastly entertaining vinous autobiography. When renowned wine critic Robert M. Parker first introduced his 100-point scoring system, "perhaps I was the only one to be surprised when America seized on the notion as the answer to the conundrum of wine," writes Johnson.

A couple of years ago, my husband David and I were discussing the merits and potential of the Long Island wine industry with several friends. At the time, it seemed that some wineries were producing better and better, in some cases even world class, wines. Parker had already visited our region, but the results were paled by what would happen in the near future.

After much debate on the subject, we decided, in 2005, to put some local wines to the test ourselves by starting what we hope is a long running summer tradition – our Annual Great Bordeaux Style Wine Tasting. In our first tasting local wines scored quite well against such fierce competition as Opus One and Chateau Latour.

It is very difficult to blind taste wines, even if you taste wine for a living and even if you happen to have one of your own wines in the tasting.

On a recent Sunday, August 20, we held our second annual tasting. The timing couldn't have been better. As everyone in the local wine industry knows, the Wine Advocate, Parker's newsletter, published the results of taster David Schildnecht's early spring visit to our wine region. And the home team did quite well, with many wines scoring 90 points or better (Roman Roth's private label 2002 Grapes of Roth Merlot scored the highest: 92). What a perfect prelude for our tasting.

Our chosen wines came from three regions: Bordeaux, California and Long Island. We also threw in a rogue from Australia. All wines (with the exception of one non-rated local) were rated 88 points or higher by the WA. We divided the tasting into two flights: one Merlot dominated and the other Cabernet dominated (loosely based on the Left and Right Banks of Bordeaux.) The Merlot Bordeaux included the 2001 Chateau Pavie (St. Emilion classed growth) and the 2000 La Mission Haut Brion (Pessac Leognan first growth). The Californian was a 2002 Twomey (Napa). The locals included the 2000 "Old Vines" from Lenz, 2002 Paumanok Assemblage, 2004 Shinn 9 Barrels Reserve and 2002 Grapes of Roth, a solo effort from Wolffer Estate's winemaker Roman Roth.

In the Cabernet flight were Bordeaux's 2001 Chateau Margaux, a 2002 Cardinale Proprietary Red from California, and the aforementioned Aussie, a 2002 Penfolds Bin 707. The Long Island Cabs included the 2002 Jamesport Méélange de Trois, 2002 Paumanok Grand Vintage Cabernet Sauvignon, and the 2001 Lenz "Old Vines" Cabernet Sauvignon.

Our guest tasters included winemakers Roman Roth of Wolffer Estate and Grapes of Roth (his private label) and Eric Fry of Lenz, local chefs Matt Murphy and Deborah Rivera and several other friends. Both Fry and Roth had two wines in the competition (the two Lenz entries for Eric and the Grapes of Roth and the Shinn 9 Barrels for Roman). After each flight, we had the winemakers make comments about the wines in that flight. Roman handled the Merlots and Eric took on the Cabs.

I was intrigued with the tasting notes and comments, particularly from the winemakers, because of what we found out last year (it was reiterated this year): it is very difficult to blind taste wines, even if you taste wine for a living and, more importantly, even if you happen to have one of your own wines in the tasting.

The results? The local wines certainly held their Several Long Island producers make sparkling wines. I recently tasted two from Martha Clara, and on August 19, my friend Anita LeGault, of Lenz Winery, invited me to the Third Annual Lenz World Champagne Classic. This consumer event (one of three held by Lenz annually) is based on the winery's long history of testing (blind tasting – with professionals) their best wines against the best wines of the world, in this case, some of the great sparkling wines of Champagne.

The Champenois take their reputation and brand seriously, and will go to great lengths to protect it. Unfortunately, the Champagne name has been abused for a long time, especially in this country. Due to this the category needs some definition.

The appellation of Champagne is found in northern France, just north of both Paris and the Chablis region. The area is at what has been considered the northern extreme of where wine grapes can get ripe enough to produce fine wine (global warming is changing this), so the wine producers adapted and found a style of wine that was better with the bright crisp acidity found in less ripe grapes.

The process of producing sparkling wine in the Champagne fashion (today known as Method Traditionelle) is very complicated and expensive. Traditional Champagne is produced by having the second fermentation (this fermentation creates the bubbles) occur in the same bottle it is sold in. All the wines at the Lenz Champagne Classic were produced in this manner, regardless of their origin. The venue was a tent on the winery grounds with several tables set with a selection of wines at each, and one table dedicated to fine cheeses from Artisanal Cheese Center. The wines shown were from California and Spain (Codorniu), Champagne (Veuve-Clicquot, Boizel, Jacquesson and Philiponnat) and of course the North Fork of Long Island (Lenz and The Old Field).

So how did the local wines compare to some top wines from Champagne and other reputable areas known for sparkling wines? In my opinion the Lenz wines and Old Field were either close to my favorites from the tasting or very close. Champagne is produced from Pinot Noir, Chardonnay and Pinot Meunier, either blended or not. All the wines used one or several of those grapes (except for those from Cava) and all

New York Wine and Food Classic: Finger Lakes Bias?

A couple weeks ago at the New York Wine and Food Classic, Hermann J. Wiemer Vineyard's 2005 Dry Riesling ($16) defeated 702 other New York wines to win the Governor's Cup, awarded to the event's best wine. Dr. Konstantin Frank's Vinifera Wine Cellars was named New York's "Winery of the Year" based on the number, and level, of medals its wines won. The event was sponsored and run by the New York Wine and Grape Foundation (NYWGF), a nonprofit statewide trade organization based in the newly opened New York Wine and Culinary Center.

Howard Goldberg reported in the New York Times that, "the wine industry and influential wine periodicals treat the contest as the broadest, most representative index of the quality and styles of New York's expanding wine industry." And, while probably true, I think it is important to point out that not every winery (including some of the best) sends wines to this event.

But the tasters can only taste what is put in front of them. The wines are tasted blind and by professionals, so the results are legit.

Several Long Island wines did quite well at the event, with Jamesport Vineyards 2004 Cabernet Franc winning "Best Red Wine," Wolffer Estate Vineyards 2005 Late Harvest Chardonnay winning "Best Dessert Wine," Corey Creek Vineyards winning both "Best Chardonnay" and tying for "Best Gewurztraminer" with its 2005 Reserve Chardonnay and 2005 Gewurztraminer, Peconic Bay Winery's 2001 Merlot taking "Best Merlot" and Roanoke Vineyards' 2003 Blend Two winning "Best Vinifera Blend."

The complete list of medal winners can be found on www.newyorkwines.org.

But I have to question some of the categories they list – and can't help but wonder where others are.

First and foremost, if categories like "Best Other White Hybrid" and "Best Other Native Varietal" are included, shouldn't a "Best Other White Vinifera" category exist, much like "Best Other Red Vinifera"? Maybe it's not there because grapes like Viognier and Sauvignon Blanc aren't grown much outside of Long Island, so they aren't "New York" enough. Then again, there are very few (very very few) hybrid or native grapes grown here on Long Island. Is this an upstate/Finger Lakes bias? Maybe. I have heard grumblings of such a thing from members of the local industry. Emails and calls to the NYWGF to find out more have gone unreturned.

Regardless, don't some of the North Fork Sauvignon Blancs, Lieb Cellars' Pinot Blanc or the unique white varieties of Channing Daughters deserve a category in which to compete? I say they do.

If the event wants to include so many hybrid and native grape varieties as categories, that's fine. Unlike many wine writers, I don't look down my nose at those fun, sometimes terrific wines. But if New York wants to flex its muscles on the world wine stage, the state's best wines need to be highlighted.

17th Annual Merlot World Classic Lenz Winery, Peconic September 9, 5:30-8 p.m.

This unique winery event features a strolling tasting of Merlots from around the world as well as several local wineries. Lenz is the only local winery to host such an event where wine lovers from near and far have an opportunity to comparatively taste other wines next to Lenz wines.

Lenz will also be releasing its 2001 "Old Vines" Merlot on September 4, Labor Day. This is the winery's ultra-premium Merlot, released only in exceptionally good vintages from grapes grown in its oldest vineyard, first planted in 1978. The 2001 "Old Vines" Merlot will be one of three Lenz Merlots available for tasting at the Classic.

"We are looking forward to the release of the 2001 Lenz 'Old Vines' Merlot," said Lenz owner Peter Carroll. "This wine is from another extraordinary vintage. The 2001 'Old Vines' Merlot has enjoyed virtually equal enthusiasm and praise among tasters as the outstanding 2000 vintage."

Admission is $45 in advance, $50 at the door, and includes unlimited tastings, a Lenz tasting glass, cheese and crackers, and a raffle ticket for several wine prizes. A portion of the proceeds will benefit Slow Food Usa/East End Convivium. Reservations can be made by calling the Lenz Tasting Room at 631-743-6010.

Note: the 2000 Lenz "Old Vines" Merlot will be available for sale in the Lenz Tasting Room through Labor Day Weekend, after which it will only be available to Lenz Subscribers for $75 a bottle, with a 3-bottle maximum. –Compiled by S.W.Simm

There's More to Lenz Than Merlot!

Taste the 2001 Lenz Old Vines Cabernet Sauvignon!

You've heard all about blind-tasting Lenz Merlot and Château Pétrus. But there's more to Lenz than merlot. In the same blind tasting*, Lenz Old Vines Cabernet Sauvignon was tasted against the fabled Bordeaux, Château Latour. Here's how the 2001 vintages compared. Hmmm!

A Chardonnay With "Special Sauce"? Coming Right Up

By Lenn Thompson

Pinot blanc, a genetic mutation of pinot gris (pinot grigio), is one of the world's most versatile grapes. Regardless of clone, pinot blanc grapes tend to have high acidity and rather neutral aroma profiles. Depending on its country of origin and the individual winemaker's approach, wines made with pinot blanc can range in style from the simple, straightforward, and light pinot biancos of northern Italy to the intricate, oaky bottlings some California winemakers are churning out that some think rival West Coast chardonnay. In the wrong hands, pinot blanc can be bland and very neutral.

The Alsace region of France is one of pinot blanc's best-known homes – and those wines are one of the best bargains in the wine world. The use of new oak in Alsatian winemaking is extremely rare, so pinot blanc here must rely on its fruit. The resulting wines from the region's better producers tend to resemble fine chardonnays without the huge intrusion of oak that sometimes marks white Burgundy.

This resemblance to chardonnay isn't limited to the finished wine, however. Pinot blanc's leaf structure, clusters and berries so resemble chardonnay that there are many vineyards in Europe where plantings of the two grapes are intermingled.

Locally, pinot blanc is grown in a few vineyards, but at Lieb Family Cellars it's an important part of the portfolio. In a field on Oregon Road in Cutchogue, you'll find thirteen acres of what Lieb, much like those Europeans, once thought to be chardonnay vines. Genetic technology has since proven that the grapes aren't chardonnay at all. These vines, which were planted in 1983, are pinot blanc – and originated in Alsace.

Rather than rip the vines out and plant chardonnay (or some other variety that is more obviously commercially viable) Lieb Family Cellars has embraced this grape completely. As a matter of fact, Gary Madden, Lieb's general manager, calls it their "special sauce" and a visit to the tasting room proves it. Pinot blanc works its way into no fewer than four different wines on the tasting menu.

A little is blended into the 2005 Bridge Lane Rose ($14), which is predominantly cabernet franc and merlot. A vast improvement on the 2004 rose, this wine is crisp and refreshing. Strawberry and watermelon aromas carry over to the palate which features a tasty lime edge on the finish. Summer is winding down, but this rose is as much at home next to a salad as it is on your Thanksgiving table. 330 cases were produced.

Pinot blanc is also blended into Lieb's second-label 2005 Bridge Lane Chardonnay ($14). Here it brings acidity and body to an extremely ripe, fruity wine. Juicy, ripe pears and apples are joined by white peaches on the nose. The well-balanced palate offers more pear fruit with slightly tart green apples and a chalky, minerally finish. Lieb's Bridge Lane wines are often good values and this soon-to-be-released vintage certainly is.

But while Lieb's "special sauce" plays a supporting role in these two wines, it's the star attraction in two of its best wines – a varietal reserve bottling and a 100 percent pinot blanc blanc de blancs.

Lieb Cellars' recently released 2005 Pinot Blanc Reserve ($19) artfully reflects the intense ripeness of the vintage. Pale yellow with a green tinge, this wine is much more aromatic than previous vintages with clean, focused citrus and wet stone. Mouth-filling and "big," this could be easily mistaken for an Alsatian wine. Pears, citrus and hints of tropical fruit mingle on the palate with minerals and chalk. The long, elegant finish offers a salty tingle of acidity. This is a new benchmark in North Fork pinot blanc.

Pinot blanc is also used in Alsace for sparkling wines, often called Cremant. Lieb Cellars has recently disgorged and released the last of its 2002 Blanc de Blancs ($35) and it continues a tradition for top-quality bubbly. Bone dry with pronounced green apple and citrus flavors, it is subtly yeasty with a butterscotch note. Delicate, elegant and refined, this is one of the North Fork's best sparklers.

Clearly, here is a "special sauce" that would make G. Love or McDonald's jealous.

own. The top rated Merlot was the Chateau Pavie followed by the Grapes of Roth and the Paumanok Assemblage (the Shinn 9 Barrel Reserve, though not in the top three, was a personal favorite). What was surprising was that the La Mission Haut Brion, which was rated a perfect 100 by Parker, came in a disappointing 6 out of 7. In fact, after the tasting was over, David and I went back and tasted it several times to see if we had missed something. We certainly didn't taste perfection.

The Cabernets were led by the Cardinale (no surprise, as big California Cabs often dominate at such tastings) with the Paumanok Grand Vintage and the Lenz right behind. Again, the surprise was that the Chateau Margaux came in last among the six entrants.

So what conclusions can be drawn from the results? Besides the obvious, that Long Island wines can compete successfully with the best the world has to offer, I have several concerns that I think this tasting brought to light.

First, winning a blind tasting has a lot to do with the style of the wines. Wines made in what is increasingly viewed as the European style – reductive, subtle, low alcohol – often seem thin or light when compared side by side with the "new" high alcohol, brash style that Parker seems to favor. In a blind tasting, the big, concentrated wines almost always win simply because they stand out. "There is no avoiding what you might call 'taster's palate,' a seemingly inevitable drift towards the more concentrated wines in any line-up," writes Johnson.

Second, a blind tasting is comparing wines with wines. Isn't wine made to go with food? As Johnson quotes an unnamed winemaker, "'I make my wines to be drunk with food, not with other wines.'" He goes on to say, "the problem goes to the heart of all test-bench judgments. Who is to say how a wine tasted, as it were, only in combat with other wines, will perform solo at table?"

But the major concern I have is whether or not winemakers will bend their style to that favored by Parker. It must be very difficult for winery owners to not allow themselves to be lured into chasing Parker ratings. "If it scores more it's worth more," writes Johnson. A 90+ point rating from Parker is money in the bank for local and worldwide wineries. By changing the style of wines made to the Parker ideal, winery owners are giving themselves a chance to increase revenue. With the tremendous amount of money invested in the local wineries, I am worried that we will see more and more "Parkerized" wines being produced here. Surely we would lose the identity and character, the terrior if you will, of our local wines.

This "is not a theoretical threat," writes Johnson. "A number of Bordeaux chateaux changed their style of wine in the 90s, and California's 'cult' Cabernets seem to be on steroids."

So what do our ratings from our tasting prove? Clearly more research is needed than time allows here at press deadline. Check back in October's Dan's Papers "Through the Grapevine" section for more musings and also the results of the First Great Burgundy Style Tasting. In the meantime, David and I plan to open another bottle of that Haut-Brion and drink it with a rare prime rib. There won't be another wine in sight.

the wines were produced in the 'Method Traditionelle' manner. Cava uses indigenous grapes of Northern Spain (Macabeo, Parallada and Xarel-lo). All the Champagnes (those from the actual region) were Non–Vintage Brut (dry, but not bone dry). Legally these wines must be aged for 15 months on the lees before bottling. The aging time is crucial for the complexity and character of the wine as well as the size and persistence of the bubbles, or "mousse."

My favorite Champagne of the tasting was the Philiponnat ($34). It was elegant and classy with a fine mousse and a nose of subtle bread dough with some crisp citrus and pear notes. My least favorite was the Veuve-Clicquot ($40) which I found heavy and clumsy with the toasty yeast notes too prevalent and the palate a bit flabby, lacking the crisp acidity that I find so important in fine sparkling wines (too much Pinot Meunier?). I found the Californian and Spanish wines from Codorniu underwhelming and not in the same league as the locals or the originals.

Lenz Cuvee 2000 ($30) worked best of all the wines considering the warm, humid evening and the selection of canapéés and cheeses. The wine was lively and fresh with white cherry aromas and a gentle yeast character, the palate and finish were crisp, balanced and long with a touch of minerals. The Lenz 1999 ($30) had more bread dough, with notes of lemon curd, apple tart and a hint of spice, the palate was classy and the finish elegant and long. Both these wines spent at least five years aging on the lees, so they are more complex and elegant than a wine spending only 15 months aging (as in NV Champagnes). Lenz also holds some of their sparkling wines back for release when they are much older. These are called R.D., or recently disgorged. The current R.D., a 1994 ($50), showed more bread and even cake notes along with baked apple and pain grille (fancy term for grilled bread), the palate and finish were fuller and toastier than the younger wines. Eric Fry, Lenz' winemaker, also makes wine for several other producers, and that is the case with the Old Field Blanc de Noir (100 percent Pinot Noir) 2001. The Old Field Blanc de Noir showed similar notes of toast and dough but with more cherry and a touch of oxidized apple and spice. The finish was long and complex. Lenz has consistently proven that our local wines can compete with the best wines of the world. Here is yet one more example.

Another great example of Long Island "Champagne" is produced by a winemaker I met a couple of years ago "sabering" a bottle of Martha Clara Brut. Sabering is the art of cutting open a bottle of Champagne. It's a bit dangerous but quite a show. Gil Martin, the saberer, was and still is the winemaker for Martha Clara, and I recently tasted both his current Martha Clara Brut N.V. (about $24) and his 2001 Blanc de Blanc (not released or priced yet but somewhere in the $30 range). They are both great examples of how fine North Fork sparkling wines can be. The N.V. Brut has a fine lingering mousse, aromas of white cherry, citrus, green apple skin and some white flower notes, some gentle toast is found in the crisp clean finish, too. The Blanc de Blanc (100 percent Chardonnay) had a finer mousse (longer ageing on the lees – almost 5 years) and notes of riper citrus fruits, some pear and a hint of toast. The palate is richer and lusher than the N.V. but still very elegant and clean. Lovely now but shows great aging potential and I believe will develop beautifully.

Building on Success at Jamesport Vineyards

By Lenn Thompson

Winemaker Les Howard's 18-plus months at Jamesport Vineyards have been some of the craziest of his winemaking career. There was the stressful-but-successful 2005 harvest season that may prove to be one of Long Island's best ever for wineries not punished by the heavy rains. He's started to develop his own style as head winemaker while maintaining the quality Jamesport is known for. And recently, he's been able to enjoy impressive scores from Robert Parker's Wine Advocate.

"Things cannot be much better here at Jamesport," he said recently.

Howard, a Long Island native, "never thought of being a winemaker" when he first started at Pindar Vineyards over a decade ago. It was only once Mark Friszolowski, then Pindar's winemaker, told Howard that he'd make a good winemaker that he considered it as a career option. After five years at Pindar, Howard worked for Osprey's Dominion Vineyards before moving on to Wolffer Estate Vineyards and Bedell Cellars. At Wolffer and Bedell he got to work with some of Long Island's most respected winemakers, including Roman Roth (Wolffer) and Kip Bedell.

Roth, in particular, seems to have influenced Howard greatly. "Working at Wolffer, with Roman, was the turning point in my career," he said.

Howard's post at Jamesport is his first as head winemaker, and he's made the transition rather smoothly. "I've been in the industry here on Long Island since 1994 and have worked at four larger established wineries. Now as head winemaker I can use the skills I've learned throughout my career and develop my own winemaking practices," he said.

The biggest surprise for Howard has been "how rewarding it is to make great wine and be credited as the winemaker." And make great wines he has – already.

Many of the Jamesport wines rated highest in the recent issue of the Wine Advocate were started before Howard joined Jamesport, but he bottled the 2004 Late Harvest Riesling. In addition, David Schildknecht, who tasted and reviewed the wines of Long Island for WA, ".....liked the 2005 Sauvignon Blanc and said the 2005s from barrel were highly promising," according to Howard.

But do the high scores – largely for wines made before he took over – put any added pressure on Howard? If they do, the new winemaker doesn't admit it. "The high quality of the previous vintages Jamesport has produced is why I chose to work here," he said. "It makes me feel great that our wines are so well regarded. It also makes me even more confident that we can continue to make excellent wines."

In addition to the highly popular 2005 Sauvignon Blanc, which offers green apple, grapefruit and vanilla-earthiness aromas and melony, appley and slightly tropical flavors with earthy and vanilla-honey notes on a lengthy finish, Howard has recently bottled his 2005 chardonnays, which he calls "wonderful".

It's the 2005 red wines that excite Howard the most, however. "These (red) wines are what I consider the best I have ever worked with! (But) we will have to wait until they are finished maturing in barrel and bottled before we can ascertain their true greatness."

Heading into the 2006 harvest season, Howard is looking forward to his second harvest with Jamesport Vineyards' owner and vineyard manager Ron Goerler Jr. "I'm looking forward to it. The vineyards are performing well and we are expecting a nice crop. The crop is not going to be as large as last year but does have the potential for high quality."

Look for Jamesport Vineyards' 2005 chardonnays to be released this fall, with the reds still needing time to mature. In the meantime, enjoy that impressive sauvignon blanc and Jamesport's East End Series of wines, which help support the Southold Project for Aquaculture Training (SPAT). Ten-percent of sales go to the program, which was created to encourage East End residents to become stewards of their environment and help revive the shellfish population in local waters.

JAMESPORT
VINEYARDS

"A Winery to Watch!"*

In the June issue of Robert Parker's Wine Advocate, Jamesport Vineyards was reviewed as a "Winery to watch!"* by David Schildknecht, Mr. Parker's tasting associate.

The Wine Advocate is generally recognized as the most prestigious and powerful wine publication in the world, using a rating system that is known to be used by wineries around the world to help determine pricing, based on tasting notes and scores from this respected and knowledgeable publication.

Here at Jamesport Vineyards, this was an acknowledgement of what we already knew: that finally the quality and price of our wines is as good and fair as any other fine wine growing region in the world. Mr. Parker's review confirms this and certainly adds credibility and legitimacy to our appellation, the North Fork of Long Island, our backyard.

We received some of the following quotes:

Jamesport Vineyards Reserve Merlots {98' and 01'} "Puts one in mind of some serious Right Bank Chateaux"-91 and 89 pts. respectively.

02" Estate Merlot- "This excellent value wine will embarrass most of the merlots in the marketplace, both for price and quality" -88 pts.

02' Melange de Trois- "Don't miss this exceptional value for an affordable opportunity to glimpse the unique potential of L.I. red wine" -90 pts.

05' Sauvignon Blanc- "Represents an excellent value"-88 pts.

04' East End Series Chardonnay- "Vivacious, lip smacking finish of the sort to seldom associated with the C- word" "Good Value" -85 pts.

04' Late Harvest Riesling {dessert wine} "Fascinating and delicious, represents an extraordinary value!" -90 pts.

The Wine Advocate finished it's excellent and exciting review of our wines and winery by saying that, "This team may just be hitting its' stride" and, exclusively, "This is a winery to watch!"

The "Team" here at Jamesport Vineyards hopes that all wine lovers will try our wines by visiting us here at the vineyard or purchasing a bottle or two at their favorite fine wine shop or restaurant.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

Ethan Allen Style Studio – 1054 Montauk Highway, Water Mill 631.726.6510 – www.ethanallen.com

Ethan Allen Style Studio, the long awaited furnishings and accessories store has finally opened their doors. After over a year of renovations and improvements, the end result is a store, filled to capacity with outstanding merchandise. The Style Studio expanded upon Ethan Allen's renowned complimentary design service. A new concept in design solutions helps customers see the brand they love in a new way. Inside the Style Studio, visitors will be embraced by its intimate, cozy setting – a shopping environment that is more like a design center than a traditional furniture store. In addition to all the quality furnishings and upholstery Ethan Allen is known for, they have gathered all the design tools necessary – fabrics, wallpaper, free design service, and more – to make the creation of entire rooms easier, from space planning through accent placement. In addition to the Water Mill Style Studio, owners Irwin Horwitz and Ed Moses have three Interior Design Centers located in Huntington, Setauket, and Bayport.

Home123 Mortgage – 303 Griffing Avenue, Riverhead 516-635-0552

Home123 Mortgage is having its "Grand Opening" reception to benefit the Little Flower School Educational Foundation on Friday, September 15, from 4 to 8 p.m. The evening will include live music, cocktails and hors d'oeuvres and all are welcomed to join in on the festivities. Right next door to the Supreme Court Building, Home123 is one of America's top ten largest providers of home mortgage loans. In the past year they have helped over 81,000 people achieve their personal financial goals and get the loan they needed, working together in a direct relationship. At Home123, they make their own credit decisions, loan their own money, and do not share their clients' personal loan information with any other lenders. They are a direct lender. They also work on what is called a "Local Platform," which means that unlike other large mortgage lenders, they keep their files in their local branch. All of the processing, underwriting and closing is done in the branch, which means that Home 123 has local control; loans close more quickly and more efficiently. Home123 is headquartered in Irvine, California, and is a subsidiary of New Century Financial Corporation, a publicly traded company (NYSE: NEW). The Branch Manager, Kate Polcha, has five staff members ready to serve you on a daily basis.

RE/MAX Beach Properties – 241 County Road 39A, Suite 4 (at the intersection of North Main Street), Southampton – 631-287-6200

RE/MAX will be providing comprehensive real estate services for properties in the Hamptons. Broker/Owner Michael Daly and his wife, Barbara, will operate the office under the RE/MAX Renowned Properties flag, which is used to market high-end homes. Daly spent twenty years as a hospitality industry executive before joining Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate in 1998. He became a top-selling agent, then the managing director of the company. He went on to serve as a senior executive at NRT before starting True North Realty Associates, which will be doing business as RE/MAX Beach Properties. Barbara Daly is a licensed real estate agent who previously spent twenty years as an executive in the health insurance industry. RE/MAX conducts business in sixty-four countries; "this gives us the power to provide high-end customers worldwide exposure when marketing their properties." The brokerage will be specializing in residential real estate and will focus on the second home and resort sales markets. Log onto the website at Hamptons RE Blog:http://truenorthrealty.blogspot.com

Hamptons Inspired Products aka (HIP) – PO Box 242, Quogue 631-574-4140 – www.hamptonsinspiredproducts.com

The "Trade Parade" Tee was conceived in the Hamptons and is based on the traffic backed up on Route 27. "Kids going back to school with a trade parade shirt will create curiosity and conversation about the meaning of the Trade Parade. The Trade Parade is part of The Hamptons local history." According to founder Caroline Fernandes of Quogue, "I feel the Trade Parade T-shirt would make a great conversation piece, especially for a back to school fashion item. I think it's also a great way to keep the tradition of the Hamptons. She added, "all the T-shirts are made in the USA, are 100% cotton and come in sizes Youth Small, Medium and Large." Caroline is an entrepreneur and chose the name Hamptons Inspired Products because she plans to produce a variety of items that are distinct to the Hamptons. Their mission is to produce T-shirts (and other products that promote the local history and cultural identity of the Hamptons. One of the few things that are shared with all people who live in a community is local expressions and folklore. She looks forward to seeing those local expressions on more unique items in the future. She looks forward to seeing her local expressions on towels, plates and more. Caroline wrote a guidebook in 2004, The Guide to New York City: Arts, Crafts & Festival, and is also a contributing photographer to The L Magazine in New York City.

Housing Works Thrift Shops – 212-366-0820. www.housingworks.org/thrifts

On August 15, 2006 Housing Works Thrift Shops started rolling on the East End to pick up donations at Hamptons Homes. The tiny, six-shop Manhattan chain will assist Hampton residents in their end of season clean up by sending its trucks directly to their front doors to collect donations. The not-for-profit Thrift Shops welcome all usable and resaleable items, including furniture, books, housewares, women's, men's and children's clothing, shoes and accessories. The organization emphasizes that these donations do much more than continue the life of the items. They contribute to the $10 million raised annually in support of homeless men, women and children living with HIV and AIDS in New York City. A pair of designer shoes that sell for $40 at one of the six Housing Works Thrift Shops in Manhattan provides ten days 'worth of hot meals for a homeless HIV mother and her child. An armchair that raises $400 pays for two weeks of supportive housing for a person in need of a stable home.

MARY'S FASHION CLIX

www.marysclix.com

Photos & Text by: Mary J Allmaras

English riding is very popular in the United States as well as in other countries. Because the English style of riding is more old fashioned and formal than Western riding, it's not surprising that English fashion would be the same. Fashion trends will sometimes reflect a change in color. The traditional black jacket, white shirt combination will probably never go out of style, nor will the knee-high low-heeled boots but some competitions may allow a little variety in color such as navy instead of black. The English saddle is usually lighter than the Western saddle, fitting close to the horse and allowing the rider to communicate intricate movements to the horse. Not only is the horse's willingness to accept commands and agility while performing judged, the rider's appearance and posture is closely observed. The formal appearance of the rider is significant, especially at the Hampton Classic.

Waiting for your turn in the ring is easy when you look this polished. Charles Owen Hampton velvet riding helmet $199. Hampton Long Sleeve Show Shirt $45. Available at Jame Sport Saddlery, LTD, Vinland Commons, Aquebogue, NY. 631-722-5882

Holding your own style during competition takes skill. Sharpen yours with a GPA helmet with stripe $395, Ariat Legacy Show Coat $400, Ariat breeches $220, Der Dau Dress boot $440. Available at Manhattan Saddlery, 117 E. 24st, NYC 1-877-673-1400

Spectators at the Classic know this elegant pink floral hat and sweater with rose pin works. Get your style covered with a hat by Anne Moore, 2468 Main St., Bridgehampton, NY 631-537-8476. Sweater available at Magaschoni, 75 Main St., East Hampton 631-329-8139

All eyes are on you in this elegant red riding jacket. GPA 5 Titium helmet about $395, riding jacket about $450, breeches about $300, Ariat black boots about $550. Available at Horse Haven, 621 Hampton Rd., Southampton 631-287-7065

An Eskadron Fly Bonnet keeps your horse happy as the two of you jump in the Grand Prix ring. Fly bonnet $39, Steuben padded halter $113.95, Barrel Racer's Knee and Shin Guards $64.95. Available at The Tack Trunk, 137 Main St., Amagansett, NY 631-267-2013

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Polo has closed and the Hampton Classic has opened. To me this means summer is soon to be behind us.....However, the shopping continues.....Let's Shop!

At Renaissance, the boutique located at 42 Main Street in Southampton, there is an "end of summer sale" in progress with 30% off all summer merchandise. New fall fashions and accessories have just arrived and are ready to go. Look for Ann Ferriday, Luna Luz, and the new Italian line of fashions by Passion Italia that include shirts, robes and much more. Don't miss out on the beautiful "Love Heals" necklaces that can also be purchased here. The shop is open every day.

Shop for a cause; join Saks Fifth Avenue at the corner of Hampton Road and Main Street in Southampton and CancerCare Present Shop of the Hamptons for a day of great shopping on Saturday, September 2, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. If you donate $50 to CancerCare, you automatically get a $50 gift certificate from Saks to be used on your purchase of $200 or more that can be used by September 15, 2006. There will be raffles and refreshments and lots of shopping!

Rags on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having a "tent sale" behind their store on Labor Day weekend. There will be great merchandise from last season and everything will be selling at 50% to 90% off. There will be Lucky jeans, Juicy sweaters, Rebeca Taylor suits, and more, all at unbelievable prices. Don't miss this one!

Stubbs & Wooton on Jobs Lane in Southampton has just started their "end of season sale" offering you 50% off on selected slippers, slides and heels. I know it's an early thought, but you can stock up on some holiday gift ideas now.....Oh well, I try to get done early for the holidays.

Making way for new shipments this fall, Waterstone Pottery on Mariners Drive in Southampton will be having a Labor Day Weekend sale. All Terracotta, cement, metal and glazed pottery will be 20% to 50% off. Now's the time to stock up.....

Have you had your eye on one of Gerri Rafferty's elegant fresh water pearl and semi-precious stone necklaces that have been seen on the gals at all the swell parties from the Parrish Gala to the Red Cross Ball? Then now is your chance to save 20% on the Dublin designer's creations at Bravura Art and Objects, 22 Nugent Street, Southampton. Included in the offerings are a three strand grey freshwater pearl and labradorite hand knotted necklace with sterling and Balinese labradorite clasp and and a five strand freshwater pearl/garnet with sterling and garnet clasp now on sale from $525 to $420 and from $750 to $600 through the Labor Day weekend.

If you're looking for Roxy of the Hamptons Hound store on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton, you will find her at the Hampton Classic boutique selling her Hamptons Hound duds.....However, the Bridgehampton shop (across from Starbucks), is having a "rained out sample sale" extended starting Friday through Sunday of Labor Day weekend. This special sale will save you up to 70% off samples and overstock merchandise that include select Bottega Venata items, Von Dutch hoodies and T-shirts, bandanas, Puppia T-shirts, satin coats, dog collars and leads, dog beds and carriers. I'm there with Tino my mini Schnauzer.....

The much sought after "Farmer's Market Wreath" ($54) is now available at designer Pamela Ferrari's boutique is a colorful addition to Newtown Lane, East Hampton. The boutique, nicely tucked away in a charming alley between Calypso and Catherine Malandrino has just celebrated their first anniversary. To celebrate, Pamela is offering shoppers a half price "summer sale" and "select items sale along with a "fall sample sale." You can also get a sneak preview of fall with the bold 'Rock Chic' velvet separates, etched in Pamela's exclusive print design.

Anastasia Holland located at 66 Newtown Lane (above Babette's Cafe, suite 2, enter rear of the store) in East Hampton has extended her "sample sale" through the Labor Day weekend. For the discriminating women, designer accessories and ready to wear unite in a private shopping showroom setting. JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID:

THE GREAT AMERICAN FAMILY PICNIC AT PARRISH

BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM KATLEAN DE MONCHY AND DAVID POST

Kids events are everywhere and when you read this, I'll be on my way to Kids Day at the Hampton Classic (next Saturday). Parrish had a party for kids and parents on Thursday, which included art workshops, a puppet show, face painting, magic, circus show, and goodies to eat, all for a good cause. The main attraction was the Catskill Puppet Theater.

Classic Cars with Bob Gelber

This week, I was made aware of what I consider to be one of the most intrusive automotive devices one could ever imagine being mandated for automobiles. Believe it or not, it's a Big Brother device called by the fancy name EVENT DATA RECORDER (EDR), that is proposed to be inserted into every automobile by 2008. EDRs are "black boxes" similar to the ones used in airplanes. They can record a lot of driving habits, including how fast you drive, if "you buckled-up-for-safety," and combined with a GPS navigation system, where you are and even if you have made a full stop at a stop sign. This is being pushed by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, (NHTSA) whose bosses have always been puppets of any existing administration. Has this government gone insane with power, with this massive intrusion of personal privacy?

Black boxes were originally mandated for airliners so that the recorded events that caused horrendous airline crashes, incidents of airframe, engine failure or pilot error, could then be detected. It is noteworthy that privately owned and flown small airplanes are not required to have black boxes of any type. With today's technology, combine a black box with GPS, which incidentally was designed by the military to make "smart bombs" smarter, and you have a truly insidious way to track events.

I was wondering who would be pushing for such an obvious intrusion into personal freedom, and it dawned on me that it could only be one of the most powerful and wealthiest businesses in America, the insurance industry. Remember, one of the nation's largest insurance companies was caught giving free radar detectors to police departments around the country. Not to save lives, but to raise insurance rates on those caught speeding! The same thoughtful folks not only left the people they insured in New Orleans high and dry, but low and wet when it came to paying out damages. They found and used any and all excuses they could, not to make payments on home damages. If the insurance companies had the information provided by the black boxes, can you imagine the claims that would be denied? Minor infringements like going 59 mph in a 55 mph zone during an accident could possibly negate your coverage. You know what I mean. We have all been forced into being a nation of scofflaws by unreasonable speed limits. If you drive at the posted speed limit on the Long Island Expressway, you run the genuine chance of being rear ended by another car, or worse, by a large truck. I've often wondered why the posted speed limit on some parts of major highways is the same as those of a commercially busy road, with many intersections, like some sections of Montauk Highway.

Maybe it's about time the special interests groups didn't run this country for their own profit. There is a definite mindset in Washington that the rich and powerful deserve to rule, and it seems they are winning. Believe me, if this automotive black box is implanted in all cars, the insurance companies will have hit a home run. It is up to us, the public, and especially all the folks that love automobiles and the freedom of the American highway, to do something about this impending legislation. I will do everything I can to make waves, big ones.

Talking about speed limits, I recently took a long road trip through the southern states, where most of the speed limits on Interstate 95 were posted at 70 miles per hour. The average speeds MOST cars were traveling at was 75 or 80. Many were going 85. All of these speeds felt reasonable and proper...and safe. Just keep a good distance from the speeding car in front of you. Virtually every new car made in the last few years is certainly very capable of traveling at these velocities. Of course, the comfort level of a Mercedes 500 is better than a Honda Civic at high speed, but both cars are safe, certainly much more so than some of the "high speed cars" of just a few years ago.

The advertising motto of the fifties' MG was "Safety fast"' and those low horsepower speedsters were lucky if they could hit 75 mph. The rakish 1954 Austin Healy 100 was called the "100" because it could break the magic 100 mph barrier, and that was with its windshield folded. Even the period high speed leader, the magnificent Jaguar XK 120, was called the "120" because it could reach that, incredible for the time, speed. Today, any entry level car can top 100 mph, stop shorter than anything made in the fifties, and out handle most pure sport cars that were made then. And yet, just like the fact that the Long Island Rail Road traveled from New York City to Montauk faster in 1914 than it does today, the major highways of America had speed limits posted in the fifties that were in many cases about the same as today. There is something wrong with this picture. With so much of our privacy eroding, we must not let every vehicle we drive broadcast our every move. Do something about it!

book review: i feel bad about my neck by nora ephron

In Nora Ephron's latest collection of essays, I Feel Bad About My Neck she leads us to believe that when a woman hits fifty, it's pretty much over. As if a switch had been hit. Overnight, women who were alluring and full of life one day, are suddenly wearing signs pasted to their foreheads that say, "It's Over." For screenwriter, director and author Nora Ephron, being invisible is only the first step in a series of hilarious and poignant humiliations.

"But consider the alternative," she says as she launches into a description of every face cream and magic potion in her bathroom cabinet that has been met with disappointment. "Every so often I read a book about age, and whoever's writing it says it's great to be old. It's great to be wise and sage and mellow; it's great to be at the point where you understand just what matters in life. I can't stand people who say things like this. What can they be thinking? Don't they have necks?……

"If I pass a mirror, I avert my eyes. If I must look into it, I begin by squinting, so that if anything really bad is looking back at me, I am already halfway to closing my eyes to ward off the sight. And if the light is good (which I hope it's not), I often do what so many women my age do when stuck in front of a mirror: I gently pull the skin of my neck back and stare wistfully at a younger version of myself."

Many of the essays in this collection have appeared in other publications at various times including Harper's Bazaar, The New Yorker, The New York Times, O At Home, O, The Magazine, and Vogue. Using the self-deprecating tone Ephron is known for, she takes us along on her ride of self effacement. She hates her neck, her handbag, having to spend seventy-five percent of her time on physical maintenance, her inability to see the way she did when she was twenty, the inability to look the way she did when she was 30. Parenting is over and so there is the empty nest to consider. She has had to move to the East Side from the Apthorp on West 79 St., and as if all that were not enough, she was the only intern JFK did not make a pass at. There's lot's of kvetching, and then, the book takes a much needed right hand turn, straight into real longing.

In the last four essays, "The Lost Strudel" (her version of Proust's Madeline), "On Rapture" (why reading a book is far more interesting than talking to ordinary people), "What I Wish I'd Known" (snippets of hard won advice), and in "Considering the Alternative" (she tackles loss and our cultural aversion to talking about death), Ms. Ephron takes us deeper and reveals a vulnerability that is heartrending in its honesty and its pain. It is the part of the book that is finally schtick-free, and as a result, stronger and funnier.

At its heart, I Feel Bad About My Neck is a collection of essays about loss; the loss of youth, beauty, health, sexuality, power and relevance, and finally, the loss of friends. Although she masks her pain by her extraordinary wit, we empathize with her, we see ourselves in her, and for many, we see where we are headed. This is not a book for women "of a certain age" who need to laugh at what might otherwise make us cry. It is a book for all women. Ms. Ephron is the girlfriend or eccentric aunt we know and trust and have turned to, knowing that she will make us laugh at all the things we've otherwise wanted to cry about. We love her because she says what we only have the courage to think.

It's true that Nora Ephron has created her own formula in her essays and films. But she is a skilled writer with a lot to say, and if the shoe fits……After all, telling the truth through humor is a gift. In the words of George Bernard Shaw, "If you want to tell someone the truth, you had better make him laugh." Whatever your age, Nora Ephron's latest collection of essays, I Feel Bad About My Neck, will make you laugh out loud, and will break your heart.

–Joan Zandell

I Feel Bad About My Neck is available at all local bookstores.

Take a Hike with Ken Kindler

Here's a short (1.5-mile) walk that you can take through hardwood forest and maritime woods, by a freshwater pond, and along a magnificent Long Island Sound beachfront. This is an exceptionally well-built and well-maintained trail system on fifty acres of preserved parkland. The trails are easy to follow and have well-placed signs and blazes. You can walk through the butterfly garden, with its many flowers and birdhouses, and visit the kiosk by the trailhead. Explore the North Fork Audubon Society website (www.northforkaudubon.org); click on "About Us" and then on "Trail Map." Print out the map and drive to 64399 North Road, in Greenport. You are in for a delightful outing.

The signs in front of the bright red house on North Road read "North Fork Audubon Society," and "Inlet Pond County Park; Park Stewardship by the Town of Southold in Partnership with the North Fork Audubon Society." If you were taking a leisurely drive to Orient Point, these signs may entice you to drive up a driveway to the parking area. If the front door of the red house is partially open, chances are good that a delightfully friendly and helpful fellow from the LI Wine Council (they have an office here) would explain what the park is all about. However, if you were not taking a leisurely drive out to Orient Point, chances are good that you would never know about this ecological jewel on the North Fork.

The park is 12.4 miles east of where Sound Avenue becomes CR-48, located on the north side of the road. Don't worry if you forget to bring a map with you, the kiosk has a large map, there are signs at all the trail intersections, and sometimes there are maps to borrow (available in a mailbox near the kiosk). There are two entrances to the trails. The white trailhead by the kiosk is obvious and easy to see, but the red trailhead is off to the left, behind the house and you need to look for it. For example, the trail blazes are plastic diamonds with white arrows; the background color of the diamond indicates which one of the trails you are on. The blazes for the white trail have black arrows with a white background. I walked the red trail and passed by the pretty Prentice Pond. I then followed the yellow trail along a bluff. A bit further along the trail, I found another trail that provides access to the beach. First I walked along the beach and then returned to the yellow trail by which I gained access to the blue trail. The blue trail circumnavigates Inlet Pond. Along the way you are treated to many excellent water views. The small trail to the "North Entrance" provides access to the park for the nearby residents, but is of little interest to the visiting hiker. I then followed the white trail back to the trailhead in the backyard of the red house.

The Town of Southold and The Suffolk County Parks Department should be commended for protecting this property, and the North Fork Audubon Society should be proud of the great job they have done in stewarding this site. Visit this spectacular trail system created and maintained by NFAS volunteers.

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island." If you would like to learn more about our trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website. www.hike-li.org book review: sag harbor: classic houses great and small

It's a small book, but well-known photographer John Jonas Gruen has packed it with beautiful images of the wide variety of historic homes in Sag Harbor. Gruen, who lives in a carriage house in Water Mill, spent numerous days happily wandering the tiny, winding streets of Sag Harbor Village, taking his signature black and white photos of his favorite old houses, from large mansions to small working man's cottages.

"Since I don't drive, I'd have my wife, Jane Wilson, or my daughter, drop me off at Canio's Books and I'd spend hours just wandering solo all over this village, waiting for something to catch my eye," he explained. "While I'm no architect, I can recognize a treasure when I see one, and in this village there are treasures on every block." He said for this reason his family has been renting out their Water Mill home each summer, and choosing to spend the past few summers in Sag Harbor.

A total of 41 Sag Harbor houses comprise his new, tastefully-designed, soft-cover photobook, which is available at The Gallery in Sag Harbor. This book, just off the press, has been done in conjunction with an exhibit of these framed black and white photos, which opened on August 5 at The Gallery, and will be up through Labor Day Weekend, with a special public opening reception on September 1.

Since Gruen admits, in the introduction to his book, that he has "no knowledge of the great art of house-building or the rendering of architectural plans," he has worked closely on this project with Richard Barons, Director of the East Hampton

Historical Society. Barons also curated the photo exhibit at The Gallery, which takes up the walls of two adjacent rooms here.

In his introduction to the book, Sag Harbor: Classic Houses Great and Small, Barons describes the 18th century whaling village as "a harbor town with small lots and eccentrically arranged lanes that feed into the Main Street, like so many streams allowing gravity to control their destiny." He added that, "What makes Sag Harbor such a feast for our eyes is the preservation of the central core of the community," which he feels focuses on the harbor, the "heart and soul of this community." Barons also writes, "If a single village can be an American icon – surely Sag Harbor and her historic buildings create that symbolic entity. It is the realness of a lived-in and sometimes rough-edged town that gives contrast and life to Sag Harbor."

In his book, John Jonas Gruen has chosen to photograph some unique and varied homes, from the splendid Union Street summer mansion of former United States President Chester A. Arthur, on the book's cover, to an 1852 Italianate Tuscan Villa on Jermain Avenue, to a Victorian "cottage" which sits prominently on Main Street. He has also photographed some interesting angles of Sag Harbor's prestigious Whaling Museum and also some beautiful shots of the famed Custom House Museum. Walking throughout the side streets and alleys of this roughly one-square-mile village, Gruen has captured unique features of these historic homes and museums, from wide porches and carved balconies to old doors, gables and columns.

Gruen writes, "I was struck by the aura of silence that pervaded each house – a mysterious Scleroderma literally means "hard skin," but often affects internal organs with life-threatening consequences. Four out of every five scleroderma patients are women, but men and children are also affected. The disease cuts across all racial and ethnic lines and affects as many individuals as those afflicted with multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy and cystic fibrosis. Currently, there is no cure, but your support will help find one.

quietude that made me wonder what dramas were unfolding within... For some reason, Sag Harbor houses, unlike those in nearby towns, conjure a world of silence and quiet industriousness."

Some of the many styles he has captured in this small town are Gothic, Greek Revival, Victorian, post-Revolutionary War Federal-style, Romantic Era, Queen Anne-style, and Classic Arts & Crafts Bungalow. It took Gruen and Barons about three years to complete the selection of houses for the exhibit and book.

Rebecca Cooper, an owner of "The Gallery," said she thinks these photos are "museum quality," and that "they really show why Sag Harbor is so fabulous." She said the new book is being presented in three ways – (1) to show the architectural background and details of each house, and where it is located, (2) to show the original owners of the houses, and what they did professionally, and (3) to show the new owners, and what their houses are presently used for. Cooper said this first version of the book, which was designed as a "sort of portable catalogue" to go along with the show, is available in her gallery for $25. John Jonas Gruen is now taking orders for a larger-sized, coffee table book of these photographs, which will sell for about $65 at The Gallery in the coming months.

The public is invited to attend a special reception for these photos on September 1, from 4:30 p.m.-6:30 p.m., at The Gallery, located at 125 Main Street in Sag Harbor.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The warm, early summer days of September are filled with a wondrous supply of sweet sun-ripened tomatoes, smooth purple and white eggplants, tiny yellow pear and heirloom tomatoes, bright yellow summer squash, crisp cucumbers, chioga beets, sweet red peppers, numerous corn varieties and the sweetest, best peaches ever at our local farm stands. Driving past farmers markets and fields of bright yellow sunflowers you will encounter a virtual kaleidoscope of colors. It is easily the best time of the year to plan a simple meal.

Vegetables have held their own as a main event for some time and are certainly no longer considered a mere side dish. A vegetable Napoleon of crispy, baked eggplant and slices of zucchini, tomatoes, mozzarella, and fresh herbs layered in a colorful arrangement can be terrific for luncheon or a light supper. I've never been a fan of cold pasta salads – true to my Italian experiences – but I'm a huge fan of pasta alla Panzanella; named for the famous Tuscan bread salad combining tomatoes, basil and onions. For pasta in the manner of Panzanella, the fresh uncooked ingredients are dressed with extra-virgin olive oil and served over hot cooked pasta. This is truly an amazing combination and one that brings back memories of many trips to Italy.

For dessert I will look toward David Cruces simple peach salad. I met David, the executive chef of Annona in Westhampton Beach, at the James Beard Foundation's Chefs and Champagne event earlier in the summer, where he shared his piquant peach recipe with me.

ROAST VEGETABLE NAPOLEON WITH ROSEMARY

Rosemary sprigs act as skewers to hold the Napoleon together. The Napoleons can be completely layered ahead and baked before serving.

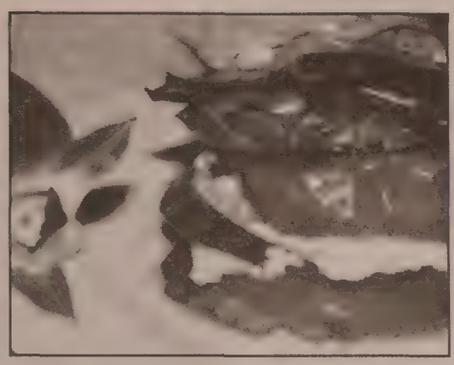
Serves 4 - 6

2 small eggplants, about 1 pound, sliced crosswise, about 1/2-inch thick
3 small zucchini, about 3/4 pound, sliced crosswise, about 1/2-inch thick
Coarse (kosher) salt
Extra-virgin olive oil
Freshly ground pepper
2 medium red onions, sliced into 1/2-inch rounds
4-6 ripe (but not overripe) heirloom tomatoes
1 1/2 teaspoons fresh thyme leaves
1 pound fresh mozzarella, cut into 1/4-inch slices
4-6 tall rosemary sprigs

1. Layer eggplant and zucchini slices in a colander and sprinkle each layer with salt. Cover with paper towel and weight down the vegetables. Let stand for 30 minutes or so to drain the bitter juices. Rinse and pat dry with paper towels.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

2. Place eggplant slices on a sil-pat or parchment paper-lined cookie sheet, brush lightly with olive oil and season with salt and pepper. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes until golden and crisp. Remove from oven and transfer to a side dish. Place zucchini and onion slices on the same lined cookie sheet, oil and season with thyme leaves, salt and pepper and bake for 8-10 minutes until vegetables are lightly caramelized. Transfer to a side dish.



3. Begin with an eggplant base on the lined cookie sheet, top with a slice of mozzarella, zucchini, onion, tomato, mozzarella, zucchini, onion and tomato and finish with eggplant. Make a hole in the center of the Napoleon with a wooden or metal skewer. Select tall rosemary sprigs, at least one-inch taller than the Napoleons and remove bottom leaves from each sprig. Insert 1 sprig into each Napoleon and bake in preheated oven about 5-7 minutes or until cheese is melted and vegetables are heated through. Serve warm.

PASTA IN THE MANNER OF PANZANELLA

Panzanella is the traditional name of a Tuscan bread salad of tomato, basil and onions. Here the ingredients are uncooked and served cold over hot pasta.

Serves 6-8

1 large red onion, peeled and coarsely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 1/2 pounds ripe fresh tomatoes (not overripe)
About 3/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Plus:
2 bunches arugula, large stems removed, wash very well and spin dry
20-25 large leaves of fresh basil, wash very well and gently towel dry
1 pound dried penne or other tubular pasta
2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt for pasta water

1. Put the coarsely chopped onion in a bowl of cold water for 20-30 minutes. Meanwhile cut the tomatoes into 1-inch pieces and put them in a crockery or glass bowl. Drain the onions and place in a clean kitchen towel. Squeeze out excess moisture then place over the tomatoes. Scatter the finely chopped garlic over onions and top with the olive oil. Season with salt and pepper (do not mix). Cover bowl and refrigerate for 1 hour or longer.

2. When ready to serve bring 4-5 quarts water to a rolling boil, adding 2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt to water. Slip in penne all at once stirring gently to separate. Cover and return water to a boil. Uncover and cook for 8-12 minutes depending on the brand or until al dente.

3. Mix the salad ingredients just before the pasta is cooked.

4. Meanwhile place arugula and basil leaves on a large platter. When the pasta is done, drain it in a colander, shaking off excess moisture and place over the greens. Immediately distribute the cold sauce over top. Toss to mix everything together and serve.

Stuff Your Own

It is said that the two processes no one wants to see are the making of sausage and the making of legislation. While making legislation appears to be truly gruesome and watching sausage being made at a factory may very well be almost as horrible, this article will try to demystify sausage-making for the home chef. When you are finished reading this, you either will be excited to make sausage at home or will never want to eat sausage again.

Authentic sausage starts with two basic ingredients: seasoned ground pork and a natural casing. Given that many people use ground pork as part of their meatloaf recipes, it may be the casing that turns people off. Yes, it is true that the sausage casing, which holds the ground meat together, is a layer of collagen from a hog or sheep's intestine. But now that we have gotten that out of the way, let's simply call it the casing and think no further on it. Needless to say, it is as important to buy clean, high-quality casing from a reputable distributor as it is to buy clean, high-quality meat.

If you happen to have a meat grinder, you can grind you own pork. Because it is important that sausage have a relatively high fat content, most sausage makers recommend using the shoulder (as opposed to the very lean loin, for example). If you buy ground pork from your butcher, be sure to specify that it has at least a 20% to 25% fat content. The pork should be coarsely ground, like hamburger meat.

Meat grinders can be hand-cranked or electric, and broadly range in prices and sizes. A professional-like stainless steel electric grinder can cost more than $500, but a largely plastic electric grinder for the home can cost as little as $130. A hand-cranked grinder can cost less than $100. Some hand-cranked grinders can be bolted down, but for the occasional sausage maker, it would make more sense to buy one that attaches to the counter with a clamp (sort of like home pasta makers).

Whether or not you grind your own pork, you will need a sausage stuffer. The cost will depend upon the amount of pork that can fit into the stuffer at one time. A home chef will probably be happy with a small stuffer holding about five or six pounds, costing about $150. Much larger, and therefore more expensive, stuffers can hold as much as 30 pounds of meat. Basically, once the ground pork is seasoned (more on that shortly), the meat is put in one end of the stuffer and is pressed through the other end, where the casing is waiting to receive the meat. Each end of the casing is tied off, in whatever lengths you want. That's sausage. All that remains is cooking the meat through, ideally on the grill.

Sausage appeals to so many people because of the relatively high fat content (so it is juicy) and the spices. The pork meat can be spiced with just about anything. Kosher salt and pepper are generally a must, and then use whatever herbs tickle your fancy. Parsley, thyme, fennel, paprika, cinnamon, cloves, rosemary, garlic, Chile pepper – the list goes on and on. You can also add other types of ingredients, such as apples bits or raisins (for a sweeter sausage) or sun-dried tomatoes.

Two particularly well-known types of sausage are Andouille and Chorizo. The pork in Andouille sausage is seasoned with salt and black pepper, plus cayenne pepper, thyme leaves, crushed garlic, bay leaf and sage, and ground cloves, mace, and allspice. The pork in Chorizo is seasoned with salt, chopped garlic, nutmeg, brown sugar and paprika. Andouille, properly made, is smoked, while Chorizo can be smoked, but need not be when smoked paprika is used.

Of course, sausage can be made with other meats, from poultry to fish to wild game. Plus, if the thought of natural casings bothers you, there are other types of casings on the market, some edible others not, and some natural, others artificial. Also, if you are buying pre-made sausage from someplace other than a gourmet market (not to mention a street vendor), check the list of ingredients, as the meat probably includes many parts other than pork shoulder.

–David Stoll

1/4 pound Pecorino cheese, cut into chunks
6 large fresh mint leaves, torn into pieces
Fine sea salt and freshly ground black pepper
Extra-virgin olive oil
Aged balsamic vinegar

1. Rinse peaches and pat dry with paper towels. With a sharp knife cut peaches in half around the pit. Discard pits. Slice peaches into wedges and place in a mixing bowl with the Pecorino and mint. Season lightly with salt and pepper then drizzle enough oil to barely coat the peaches. Toss very gently to mix and transfer to a serving bowl. Garnish the fruit with droplets of your best aged balsamic vinegar and serve.

Dining in the Hamptons

Summer's Sweetest Veggie

Just the other day, I stopped at a local farmstand and to my surprise was greeted with a tray of fresh watermelon squares. The woman asked me if I would like to try some and just as I was reaching for the toothpick, I stopped. "Why is this watermelon yellow?" I asked. "Oh, this is our Yellow Doll watermelon." As I placed the square into my mouth, I was taken back by the sweet, fresh taste. Watermelon is not only one of summertime's sweetest treats, it is also fun to eat and good for you, too.

Here in the Hamptons, you can find a variety of watermelons at any local farmstand or supermarket. Watermelon is a tender, warm-season vegetable and can be grown in all parts of the country. However, the warmer temperatures especially favor this vegetable. Today, there are more than 100 different varieties of watermelons. The flesh may be red, pink, orange or yellow.

So, after trying that Yellow Doll watermelon, I decided to buy one for my family to try as well. I brought it home and cut it crossways, then sliced the resulting round slabs into halves and quarters. I placed it on a nice serving tray that had large, fluffy designs of watermelon leaves on it. When my family returned home to see how domesticated their twenty-something had become, I was faced with yet another challenge for the old watermelon. "Oh, honey, this is so good, why didn't you make melon balls?" Melon balls, I thought?

Apparently we have a melon baller, which I had previously used as the ice cream scooper, but we won't tell Mom about that. Melon ballers are relatively inexpensive and can come in funky shapes like a heart, diamond or wavy ridges. The handles can even have fun designs on them, too. Using the twist of the wrist, you can scoop all the watermelon into balls. The watermelon shell can be used to hold the melon balls as well as other fruit for a nice decorative fruit salad.

The great thing about watermelons is that everything about them is edible. Watermelon rinds are sometimes used as a vegetable in stir-fry dishes and can be stewed and pickled. Watermelon seeds are also rich in fat and protein and are widely eaten as a snack, added to other dishes, or used as an oilseed. Of course, there are also seedless watermelons that are grown out here, containing a few white seeds in their flesh.

After receiving the melon baller advice from my family, my sister walked in the door and asked if there was any more watermelon that I had yet to slice. Upon my negative answer, she told me how she would have loved to make a delicious alcoholic watermelon cocktail with the Yellow Doll. I explained to her that I have already had a nice watermelon martini at one of the many al fresco dining areas here in the Hamptons, but my sister proceeded to roll her eyes. "No, my idea is not to just garnish with the watermelon but to actually make the watermelon flesh alcohol." Since the watermelon is 92 percent water by weight, I figured this couldn't be too difficult.

My sister explained that the easiest way to make a "hard watermelon" is to bore a hole in the watermelon, pour liquor inside and allow it to mix with the flesh. The watermelon is then cut and served at room temperature or cold. I promised that on my next trip to the farmstand that I would grab an extra watermelon for happy hour.

There are so many things to do with a watermelon, some artists even cut the shell and make creative designs with the rind. Even though watermelon is one of America's favorite fruits, it is actually a vegetable, but don't tell your children that it is good for them. Watermelons are low in calories and very nutritious. They are also high in lycopene, second only to tomatoes. Recent research suggests that lycopene, a powerful antioxidant, is effective in preventing some forms of cancer and cardiovascular disease. Watermelon is also an excellent source of Vitamin A and Vitamin C.

Who knew that vegetables could taste so good? Watermelons can serve as a delicious treat, a creative outlet, and a refreshing afternoon cocktail. Here on the East End, the watermelons are grown fresh locally. We all can remember hot summer days with their red juice running down our chins. It is a great way to re-connect with those dusty memories. So, go out there and get yourself, and your family, a watermelon, I promise there are a lot of sweet things to learn.

Bamboo

47 Montauk Hwy.
East Hampton, NY
631-329-9821

Most people out here have frequented this pan-Asian hotspot before – to sip cocktails and feast on sushi by a sleek wrap-around bar, to chat with the Thursday evening crowd and bounce along to a thumping bass. During the doldrums of winter months, it seems the only lively place to spend an evening. During the summer months, it is swarming with cars, the bar packed with chic hipsters holding Sake-tinis. Nestled on Montauk Highway, Bamboo has no doubt become a staple in the nightlife scene over the years, but if you haven't taken a moment to sit down for a meal, it's time.

This is exactly what I did last Thursday, with my friends Robin and Christian and a few others who stopped in for a casual drink or quick snack.

After chatting with our waitress, Dominique, who described a few daily specials and enthusiastically recommended a few of her favorites, we placed our order. Rather than the usual sushi assortments, which are competent to be sure, we decided on some more exotic choices to satiate our hunger.

The appetizers arrived promptly, dazzling us with that minimalist elegance common among most high-end Japanese establishments. In this vein, each dish at Bamboo is constructed with impeccable design and precise attention to detail as the assortment of sashimi dishes proved instantly, especially the paper thin fluke fanned out neatly over a handsome dish and prepared in a tart, zesty citrus sauce. The yellowtail sashimi was a tender fresh-tasting fish perfected by a delectable ponzu sauce and a burst of jalapeño. The tuna tartare was served on a crisp, thin bread and topped with cubed tuna, roasted yellow peppers, crispy capers and dabbled with a wasabi Aioli. Although a bit strange in theory, this sashimi-pizza hybrid was as delicious as it was memorable.

After these impressive sashimi dishes were gobbled up voraciously, a second round of appetizers was placed before us. Of these, I recommend the succulent Peking duck spring rolls in Hoison sauce. The chicken satay – juicy skewers in a pungent peanut sauce – is perhaps a less interesting choice but a safe bet for less adventurous diners, as are the house salads and shumai options. Although exotic dishes are offered, like tiger shrimp tempura sticks or the lobster summer rolls, don't overlook the obvious choices. Here, even standard miso soup is packed with edamame, chunks of tender tofu and lobster wontons. Another popular option on the menu of Asian-fusion fare is the tender five spice BBQ spare ribs.

Among the main courses (Large Plates) are crispy-skinned duck, Bang Bang Chicken, and pan-seared tuna served with grilled pineapple and avocado in a ginger-scallion sauce, all of which I recommend from past experience. Sliced Mongolian beef is another good pick, or the halibut in ginger sauce for healthier diners.

On this evening, Robin and I shared two of these large dishes. The first was a jumbo lemongrass shrimp over vegetables. Although aromatic and well seasoned, I felt the shrimp were overwhelmed by a smoky taste from the grill. Still, with a flavorful slaw of vegetables and tender meat, the overall effect was successful.

And then, the peak of my meal, of my week, perhaps – Miso Black Cod... These words have almost divine status in the culinary world, but the dish demands precise execution. In this case, the tender, melt-in-your-mouth cod was cooked to an immaculate consistency and glazed in a subtle harmony of miso and spices. And while this attractive fillet might seem too precious to destroy at first, take a taste. You will devour it with glee. Clean, simple, delicate, delicious. I usually try not to sound too effusive, but this dish will have you on your knees and chanting.

The desserts, which came with a second round of drinks were equally impressive. While the rich chocolate mousse was a bit too heavy for the summer evening, I found the ginger infused crème brulee delightful.

For those who thought of Bamboo as just some other swanky bar, this review might have come as a surprise. However, the culinary excellence should be expected considering the pedigree in the kitchen, an impressive team led by sushi chef Morgansan Yao, who worked at Manhattan's Nobu (the Mecca of Japanese cuisine as far as I'm concerned).

The chic décor is another point of interest, with an entranceway that weaves through ceiling-high bamboo and a dimly-lit dining area with romantic booths. (Great for dates!) Plus, the martinis are glorious; the waitstaff is hot and friendly, and the music's always pumping. And one more thing – it's unpretentious, balancing sleek elegance with casual fun.

Appealing to both the summer crowd and the year-rounders, Bamboo has become an indispensable part of the culinary experience in the Hamptons. Just make sure to get there early enough, as the crowds get loud, and sometimes a little rowdy. Of course, this might be a good thing, especially come February.

Bamboo is open 7 days, 5:30-10:30 p.m. Mon.-Wed., 5:30-11 p.m. Thrus., Fri. & Sat. 5:30-midnight.

A Look Back.....2005

Joe Fargis Win in $100,000 Prudential Grand Prix

Culminating a week that celebrated 30 years of Hampton Classic history and the careers of retiring executive directors Tony Hitchcock and Jean Lindgren, Joe Fargis, a rider who holds his own place in show jumping history, put an exclamation point on last year's horse show with a ride that all who were there will talk about for many years to come.

Fargis, the three-time Olympic medalist from Southampton, NY and Middleburg, VA, thrilled a crowd of 12,000 with an electrifying dash to the finish line to win the week's main event, the $100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate Grand Prix, by 13 one-hundredths of a second.

Fargis, 57, was the last of eight riders in the jump-off and he rode Edgar 12, owned by Mary B. Schwab and OEJI Farm, to a fault-free ride in 41.69 seconds. That narrowly beat the 41.82 seconds turned in on the previous ride by his 1984 and 1988 Olympic teammate, Anne Kursinski of Frenchtown, NJ on Roxanna 112. Third place went to Candice King of Wellington, FL, who had led for most of the jump-off after riding Tarco to a clean ride in 42.02 seconds.

"I have a great horse who really was extra great today," said Fargis, who won individual and team Gold Medals at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics and then a team Silver in 1988, of his 16-year-old Hanoverian gelding. "I just pointed him in the right direction and he did the rest."

"I thought my time might be good enough but I knew who was still behind me," Kursinski said, referring to Fargis who also won the Grand Prix at the Hampton Classic in 1991 on Mill Pearl. "I think I held up a little too much at some of the turns; I have to admit that I was hoping that Joe would have a rail down. Still, my horse did magnificently and I am very happy."

Of the 30 starters in the class, the eight in the jump-off got there by riding fault-free over the 17-effort first-round course designed by Conrad Homfeld. They then returned one by one for their turn over the seven-jump tiebreaker course and it all built to the dramatic finish with one of the sport's most respected riders taking top honors in a week replete with history at the Hampton Classic.

"It's always great to win but I suppose it does mean a little more in this 30th anniversary year where our executive directors are retiring," Fargis said. "I guess it was a good ending to a great week!"

In addition to the $30,000 first-place prize money, Fargis also received a gold and silver David Yurman belt buckle and a jeroboam of Louis Roederer Champagne. Fargis also finished as the horse show's leading open jumper rider, aided by two wins earlier in the week including a win in the $30,000 Sotheby's International Realty World Cup Qualifier which set the field for the Grand Prix. Fargis, who also won the horse show's Antares Style of Riding Award, became the first rider in Hampton Classic history to win both the qualifier and the Grand Prix in the same year.

Other Open Jumper Classes

In the Sotheby's Qualifier, nine of 54 entries made it to the jump-off where Fargis and Edgar 12 were the first to go. Fargis explained that the strategy for the pair was simple; they had none.

"There was no game plan," he said. "I just took a shot and went with it. My strategy was to do the best I could with all that I have learned over the years."

Rain Fails to Dampen Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day

At 31st Annual Hampton Classic Horse Show

Rain failed to dampen the celebration at Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day at the 31st Annual Hampton Classic Horse Show on Sunday, August 27. Although the crowds thinned out once the rain started, the remaining enthusiasts were not disappointed.

Festivities began with the World of the Horse Opening Day Ceremony featuring a variety of attractions for the whole family, including the beautiful black Allan Arrieta Friesians, the Millstone Farm Miniature Horses and llamas from Llamaland. Headlining the ceremony this year was John Casey's Frisbee dogs K-9s in Flight, who delighted the audience with exciting and entertaining Frisbee tricks.

Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day also featured Long Island competitors in several hunter classes while throngs of nervous parents watched as their little ones participated in the Short Stirrup and Leadline classes for their first appearances in the Grand Prix ring. Olympic Gold Medalist Joe Fargis graciously served as judge in the Leadline classes.

Todd Minikus and Elton, owned by Tracey Topping, won the $20K Nicolock Time Challenge

Some familiar names topped the results board in the Local Divisions. In the Local Amateur-Owner Division, the Champion was Quiet Arrival, owned and ridden by Jodi Czaplick of Speonk, NY. The Reserve Champion was Cast A Spell, owned by La Bagatelle, LLC, and ridden by Cathy Zicherman. The Local Junior Hunter Champion was Titleist, owned by Manhattan Mortgage Company and ridden by Alexandra Skiffington. Elysium and Danielle Franchi were the Reserve Champions.

In the Local Working Hunter Division, Professionals, Section "A," the Champion was Cozzi, owned and ridden by Kelly Klein, and the Reserve Champion Arenzano, owned by Martin Puris and ridden by Laura Bowery. In the Section "B" of the Local Working Hunter Professionals, the Champion was Gatsby, owned by Ariana Boardman and ridden by Pamela Polk. The Reserve Champion was Bulgari, owned by Manhattan Mortgage Company and ridden by Katie Milton. The Local Working Hunter, Non-Professional champion was Norlando, owned by Christy Holzer and ridden by Marsia Holzer. The Reserve Champion was Monopoly, owned by Pamela Suskind and ridden by Andrea Skiffington.

The highlight of the day was the $20,000 Nicolock Time Challenge, a speed class featuring world class show jumping in the Grand Prix ring. Todd Minikus of Loxahatchee, FL dodged in and out of the raindrops to top the field of 38 riding Eltonn, owned by Tracey Topping of Wellington, FL. The pair negotiated the Conrad Homfeld course in a blistering time of 64.37 seconds. A rail down added four penalty seconds to their time but their adjusted time of 68.37 was still good enough for them to beat Joe Fargis and Ingaletta, who went clear, in a time of 68.59 seconds. Third went to Lisa Silverman of New York, NY, riding her own Flubber Cocoy also without fault, but in a slower time of 68.89 seconds.

Minkus was not surprised with Eltonn's performance, even with the adverse conditions. "He's not afraid to go," said Minikus of Eltonn. "I don't think the rain played a part in the results of the class other than the annoyance factor. Winning is always nice. It makes it a little sweeter to win at the Hampton Classic, one of our premier shows in the country."

The Hampton Classic continues through Sunday. Admission is $10 per person or $20 per carload, with children under 6 admitted free of charge. Children under 12 are admitted free on Cablevision's Kids Day on Saturday. Reserved grandstand seating for Sunday, September 3 is $15 per person (in addition to regular admission) or $25 per person in the special Premium Seating center sections. Parking is free throughout the week.

Those unable to attend the Hampton Classic have ample opportunity to enjoy the show on television. WVVH-TV, the official Long Island television station of the Hampton Classic, is broadcasting up to five hours of competition and highlights each day during the Classic. These broadcasts can also be seen online at www.wvvh.tv.

Additionally, WCBS-TV/CBS 2 New York, the official New York television station of the Hampton Classic, will broadcast a special one-hour program of Hampton Classic highlights on Saturday, September 9 at 7 p.m. The special will feature action from the frontlines, behind the scenes, and colorful social events connected with the Classic.

The Classic is also receiving extensive coverage on WLIU 88.3 FM, the official radio station of the Hampton Classic. WLIU will broadcast live programs from the Classic on Saturday-Sunday, September 2-3.

Results and further information on the Hampton Classic Horse Show are available at the Hampton Classic website at www.hamptonclassic.com or call (631) 537-3177.

Kids Get Chance To Horse Around at Cablevision's Kids Day at the Hampton Classic

Pony Rides, Petting Area, National Circus Project Highlight Fun Activities

Kids get their chance to "horse around" as free pony rides, special attractions, give-aways and the excitement of international show jumping highlight the 13th annual Cablevision's Kids Day at the Hampton Classic Horse Show on Saturday, September 2. The Hampton Classic, one of the nation's premier hunter-jumper horse shows, runs through Sunday, September 3.

"We are thrilled to join with Cablevision to offer families the chance to spend a day together at the horse show," said Shanette Barth, Hampton Classic Executive Director. "Whether it is eating in the food court, shopping in the Boutique Garden, watching Olympians or young kids compete, or just spending time in the petting area with all the different animals, Cablevision's Kids Day at the Hampton Classic is the perfect family attraction. There is something for everyone!"

Pony rides, special attractions and giveaways at Kids Day

Kids under 12 are admitted to the Hampton Classic free of charge on Cablevision's Kids Day and each child is entitled to a complimentary pony ride. The day gets started at 10 a.m. and continues through late afternoon.

Featured competitions on Cablevision's Kids Day include the $10,000 Wölffer Estate Equitation Championship, $20,000 SHF Enterprises 5-year-old and $30,000 Split Rock Farm 6-year-old Young Jumper Championship Finals, the $25,000 Sotheby's International Realty Challenge, the $15,000 WGHR Farm Junior/Amateur-Owner Jumper Classic, and the $2,500 Pony Hunter Classic, sponsored by the Corcoran Group. The Jumper Ring also features the USEF Zone 2 Medal Championship and the Marshall & Sterling $2,500 Adult Amateur and $2,500 Children's Jumper Classics.

Cablevision's Kids Day features the National Circus Project where performers teach kids the basics of juggling, plate spinning and stilt walking. Magicians, face painters, Latin dancers and other attractions will keep everyone entertained throughout the day. A "hands-on" art area will be featured where representatives of the Children's Museum of the East End (CMEE) will be on hand to work with kids on special projects.

In the World of the Horse™ Tent, near the pony rides, kids will find Llamaland, miniature horses, and those big Teddy Bears of the horse world – Friesians, even some mares with their foals! Kids will also be able to climb on a special playground installation furnished by Walpole Woodworkers.

They went clean in 45.18 seconds and it was then a waiting game to see if it would hold up. Fargis took nothing for granted. "It's against my nature," said Fargis. "I thought I would be ninth."

The last pair to go looked like they would unseat the leaders. Kursinski and Roxanna were racing their way to the top, but just missed with a faultless round, and a slightly slower time of 45.54. As would be the case two days later in the Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate Grand Prix, mere fractions of a second would separate Kursinki from the win. "I can't complain; Joe has been an inspiration to me and the other riders for a long time and I'll never complain about being second to him."

The horses who failed to advance from the Sotheby's Qualifier to the Grand Prix held center stage on the day between those classes in the $25,000 Fendi Cup. In what proved to be a hugely exciting class, Aaron Vale of Aiken, SC, prevailed over a field of 40, taking top honors aboard Jumex Sport Luigi, owned by Millstream Inc.

This was the first Grand Prix win at the Hampton Classic for Vale and he felt the keys to his win came at the Fendi and Sotheby's fences.

"We had a really good turn going in and out of the Fendi fence (fence #11)," said Vale. "We also had a good gallop to the Sotheby's vertical (fence #15). I think that's really what gave me the win."

Juniors and Amateur-Owner Riders Also Shine

In the featured event for Junior and Amateur-Owner riders, Nikko Ritter of Geneva, FL won the $25,000 Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby on

Qroqant Z. Ritter and his mare from Argentina jumped to the win with a clear jump-off round in 42.283 seconds.

"I am very, very happy to win this class," said Ritter after his win in the member event of the Show Jumping Hall of Fame Jumper Classic Series. "My goal was to come here and finish at least third."

This was a lofty goal considering that Ritter had only been riding his mare for four weeks. Additionally, he and Qroqant Z had finished back in the middle of the pack with eight faults in the qualifier for the Derby. In the big class, however, the pair went clean to be one of only six that made it into the jump-off. Ritter was first in the order, which he actually thought was to his advantage.

"I was going to go as fast as I could no matter what, hopefully without knocking any rails," said Ritter. "I wanted to put pressure on the rest of the riders to catch up. I knew I had Brianne (Goutal) going after me and the other day she took three seconds off everyone else's time."

Goutal, of New York, NY and Onira, who won the qualifier for the Final, took third in the class with a clear round and a time of 42.878. Goutal had the additional distinction of receiving the prestigious Shalanno Farms Junior Jumper Style of Riding Award.

Addison Phillips gave everyone a scare on the first of her two horses that she qualified for the jump-off. Going into the final fence, they left out a stride and fell. Phillips dusted herself off and then amazed the crowd with a courageous ride on her other horse, Flight, finishing fault-free in a time of 42.598 for second place.

Danielle Torano of Ft. Lauderdale, FL, took top honors in the $15,000 WGHR Farm Junior/Amateur-Owner Classic going clean on Lojana in a time of 40.173 seconds.

Torano was thrilled with the win for Lojana, who entered the Hampton Classic leading the Show Jumping Hall of Fame Series' Amateur-Owner East Conference standings. The pair had come in second in both 2002 and 2004, but this time they made it to the top.

"It's so great to win after being runner-up twice," said Torano. "It is such a special class and field."

Jessica Speiser of Wellington, FL proved the best of the elite equitation riders at the Classic as she won the two-round Calvin Klein Equitation Championship.

The original field of 40 Juniors and Young Riders comprised riders who had qualified for the championship through top placings in 2004 equitation finals, 2005 USEF Talent Search classes or the USEF Medal class at this year's Hampton Classic. On Thursday, they each rode over Conrad Homfeld's 13-jump course that included one double combination, one triple and the Hampton Classic's famed water jump.

Riders received numerical scores from judges Sue Ashe and Philip J. DeVita, Jr. with one point deducted from the subjective score for each jumping and/or time fault and the top 10 advanced to Saturday's final. In the final round, the ten riders rode in inverse order of standing, carrying their scores forward from round one.

Speiser proved the best with Ritter, who would add his Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby win the next day, placing second.

"This really is a phenomenal class," said DeVita. "It requires the effective riding style that we seek in equitation with some of the decision making abilities needed to jump Grand Prix courses. I think this class really stands out as a great test for our upcoming riders."

"We really saw some very good riding," said Ashe. "Conrad Homfeld is an absolute genius. He set a technical course that was a true test of riders' abilities and he separated the best from the rest of the pack. The top riders really rose to the occasion."

Katie Couric and Christie Brinkley

Parties, Celebrities and More!

During last year's Hampton Classic, retiring Executive Directors Tony Hitchcock and Jean Lindgren were honored for their three decades of leadership and dedication to the Hampton Classic at a special benefit that raised more than $60,000 for the Equestrian AIDS Foundation and "The Ride for Hope."

Melissa Cohn and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Puris hosted the "cabaret" benefit at the Bridgehampton Raquet & Surf Club. They joined Hampton Classic President Dennis Suskind, Equestrian Aids Foundation Vice President R. Scot Evans, and television personality James Lipton in honoring Hitchcock and Lindgren in a brief yet moving ceremony.

Following the ceremony, SHOW CIRCUIT MAGAZINE presented a special performance by acclaimed Broadway star Deborah Cox. Ms. Cox, who dazzled the more than 250 guests with her performance on the "cabaret stage," is best known for her outstanding performances in the musical hit Aida She presented a program ranging from well-known Broadway show tunes to her inimitable stylized versions of jazz and blues standards. After completing her planned set she returned for an encore performance where she rocked the house and got everyone dancing in front of the stage (and, in some cases, with her up on the stage!).

"Jean and I couldn't have asked for a nicer tribute or a more enjoyable evening," Hitchcock said. "We hadn't really wanted a farewell party, but we agreed to this one because it was benefiting the Equestrian Aids Foundation. "Seeing so many people come together for this important cause, and having the chance to say thank you to many of our friends made the night truly meaningful."

As always, the Hampton Classic provided leadership in charitable effort and support. In addition to the party that benefited The Equestrian AIDS Foundation, and its annual commitment to Southampton Hospital, the Classic teamed with horse show exhibitors and spectators to assist with relief efforts in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Some exhibitors donated their prize money to the relief effort and the Classic set up a special booth for the American Red Cross to accept donations. These two efforts collected more than $32,000 to assist hurricane relief.

As always, an amazing line-up of celebrities and stars were on hand to watch and be part of the Classic. Well-known personalities on hand during the week included Calvin and Kelly Klein, David Yurman, James Lipton, Bruce Springsteen, Christie Brinkley, Alec Baldwin, Peter Boyle, Katie Couric, Kelly Ripa, Lou Dobbs, Deborah Cox, and Ahmad Rashad.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

ALTERNATE SPACES: OLIVE REICH AT UBS

Part 1

A fair amount has been written recently about alternate art spaces in the Hamptons. One feature article even provided a list of venues. And we art critics are quick to include non-gallery spaces when a specific exhibit warrants it.

Lacking in these endeavors, however, is a more in-depth examination of the particular properties afforded by alternate spaces : what effect does the setting have on the art which is displayed? For example, space that's not suited to the art can produce negative results. In other words, surroundings should complement the art; art should complement the surroundings.

The current show at Southampton's UBS Financial Services does just that. Watercolors, by Olive Reich, which have enhanced conventional gallery spaces through the years, do the same thing at UBS. Curator and UBS financial advisor Karen McNamera has a good sense of what will work.

Work by Olive Reich

First, the works establish a "feel-good" ambience as one enters UBS' front lobby, providing a comfortable, casual, yet elegant back-drop to the sparse furniture placed around the small foyer: a sofa, chair and sideboard made of dark wood. Light filters in from a window; plants are tastefully positioned. Ms. Reich's still lifes are non-threatening. No "in-your-face" pieces that provoke the mind or emotion. Simply beautiful renditions of flowers, vegetables, baskets, vases, and often an American flag or other patterned material. Such subjects do not suggest the mundane or boring aspects of life, however.

There's a crisp, fresh, life-affirming quality about Ms. Reich's work that seems serene yet also energized. A visitor to UBS is immediately put at ease: a most beneficial element for both the firm and the client.

What a perfect setting for someone who has to deal with decisions about money and investments.

The American flag in one of Ms. Reich's work is also appropriate for this setting, serving as an icon for both democracy and capitalism.

Such an icon also suggests that investing in America is a good thing to do.

Ms. Reich's affinity for patterns and texture is another strong aesthetic element in her work. While one is reminded of Matisse, the pieces evoke their own special kind of sensibility. While it's clear that the artist draws from the nostalgic past, certain design aspects are universal in nature.

The exhibit will be on view until Sept. 14. Call UBS at 631-749-0136.

Honoring the Artist: Dan Black

This week's cover poster celebrating the 2006 Hampton Classic is not what we might expect where horses and their riders are usually the primary subjects. Instead, the artist Dan Black concentrates on an underlying optimism that prevails. Or as Mr. Black puts it, "Despite all the insanity of life, the serenity that the work presents will not vanish."

Mr. Black sees this cover as being atypical in another way as well, its "moments of anticipation of things to come." Even so, the image maintains the artist's consistent style of romantic realism.

Speaking of anticipation, it's doubtful that Mr. Black could have predicted the course his own life would take, considering his family's professional pursuits. His mother's side were Jehovah's Witnesses; his father's family were bankers.

While Mr. Black was apparently influenced by two very different kinds of traditions, it didn't seem a problem. He found a perfect balance, becoming both a volunteer for the Jehovah's Witnesses and also an artist.

First, his art.and particularly his interest in horses. According to Mr. Black, he was intrigued by the "bond that develops between people and their horses. Cats are aloof; a dog is all over you. But a horse is a compromise. I've loved horses every since I would come to the Hampton Classic and would spend my summers here. It was quite a bit different from Brooklyn Heights where I grew up. My wife's family lived near Two Trees Farm on Scuttlehole Road so I got to know horses that way, too."

As a volunteer for Jehovah's Witnesses during the last 18 years, Mr. Black has only recently been able to devote more time to painting.

"An important step in my development came when I took a watercolor workshop in Maine," he explains. "I learned how to become more spontaneous, to finish a work in a few hours. Now when we go to Tuscany, for example, I come home with 14 or 15 finished works; before, they would be half-done."

Mr. Black also recalls another pivotal point in his artistic life when he traveled to South Dakota, creating a series of paintings of the region. A friend published the series as cards.

When asked what guiding principle he uses to evoke his images, whether they are landscapes, horses or portraits (which he has also done), Mr. Black answers without hesitation: " My work has an old-world quality, like the eighteenth or nineteenth century, a more civilized period."

Yet Mr. Black has another passion as well: a penchant for helping people and learning from them through his work with Jehovah's Witnesses. Such commitment takes him to many different places when he lectures, also helping him deal with people who have a prejudice against organized religion.

It's all in a day's work, however. While it's true Mr. Black is a busy person, balancing two professions throughout his week, he wouldn't have it any other way. "You're in a good place if you want to do a lot of things," he says. "We train our kids to be bored. They don't have enough to do."

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

After a long lifetime of watching musicals, my top picks would be Carousel, West Side Story, Les Miz and La Cage aux Folles. What makes a great musical? For me, the essentials are songs that are melodious, lyrics and a book that tell a story that makes you experience the whole gamut of human emotion from laughter to tears and all points in between. Jerry Herman's La Cage aux Folles was controversial when first staged in New York in 1983, a time when stories of gay relationships, however monogamous and long lasting, were thought to be likely an anathema to many of the potential theater going audience. However, its sensitive depiction of human relationships within and outside a family ensured that it survived and to have long award winning runs in both New York and London.

The Gateway Playhouse production of La Cage that has just opened at the Patchogue Theater can really be reviewed in just a few words. It is simply brilliant. I say this after having seen both the original Broadway and London productions several times. The story is set around a gay couple in the south of France who have been together for twenty years and run a nightclub. Georges is the business and front of the house man while his partner, Albin, is the female impersonator par excellence. Georges has an adult son from a long ago liaison with a showgirl, when he was still deciding on his sexual preferences, and now the son, Jeanne-Michel, turns up with the good news that he is engaged and his in-laws are coming to visit. Good news often is followed by bad and the father of the fiancée, Anne, is a notorious political homophobe, unlikely to be pleased with the lifestyle of Albin and Georges. The ensuing confusion and misunderstandings bring all of the elements of a true French farce to

This is a show for which it is absolutely vital to get the casting right. This production has two excellent and very versatile actors and Broadway veterans, Richard White and David Edwards, starring respectively in the roles of Georges and Albin. Richard White plays the masculine part of the duo with great aplomb and tenderness and displays a strong melodious singing voice, especially in that very poignant number, "Look Over There." David Edwards spends the majority of the evening dressed or dressing as his alter ego, ZsaZsa, the female nightclub chanteuse and carries this very difficult role magnificently. From his first big number, when he sings about putting on, "A Little More Mascara" while making himself up and donning his gown and high heels, to the iconic number "I Am What I Am," which he delivers with a passion and a feeling I have never seen or heard equaled. This is a consummate display of acting. Between them, there is a chemistry, a rapport, that makes for an electrifying night. If you allow yourself to be drawn into their world, you will laugh and cry with them – I did!

No nightclub could exist without its dance troupe and La Cage has "Les Cagelles." These are a wonderfully athletic, high stepping beautiful troupe of "ladies." You have to guess who is who and what is what, all part of the illusion before the wigs and the gowns reveal the truth. At the end of a side-splittingly funny rendition of a can-can, at the finale, where all the dancers perform flying full splits, you could almost hear the men in the audience wince in sympathy!

In supporting roles, James Duane Polk was hilariously camp as Albin and Georges' servant, Jacob. Mark Fisher and Hanna-Liina Vosa made a charming and tuneful couple and Daren Kelly and April Woodhall convincingly bigoted in-laws.

Director DJ Salisbury, Artistic Director Robin Joy Allan, Scenic Designer Kelly Tighe, Producer Paul Allan and all of the Gateway staff should be very proud of this production. The sets are functional and well designed and the costumes are appropriately glitzy. This show confirms the depth of musical talent we have and it is just a pity that today we have no one writing musicals of this quality.

If you truly love the musical theater do not miss this production – it is world class standard and deserves to be a total sell out with lines round the block!

Entertainment In The Hamptons

preview: hiff at Southampton Cinema...by jan silver

The Hamptons International Film Festival gave a heads-up to cinephiles on August 26 with a sneak preview of Dito Montiel's A Guide to Recognizing Your Saints at the Regal/UA Southampton Cinema. There will be 150 new features and documentaries shown at this fall's festival in East Hampton, Montauk, Sag Harbor and now Southampton from October 18-22.

Dito Montiel is very much what the Hamptons International Film Festival is all about – first-time independent filmmakers. He wrote the screenplay and directed the film based on his memoir of the same title. Guide is the story of growing up in Astoria, Queens, in the 1980s, a time when the neighborhood was gritty, graffitied and tough. Its teenage inhabitants, whose every other word seems to be f—, have few options for adulthood except drugs, prison or death.

Orlando Montiel Jr. is the son of a Nicaraguan father and an Irish mother. His nickname is Orlandito, which gets shortened to Dito. He attends Catholic school and hangs out with his friends Antonio, Nerf and Guiseppi (Antonio's younger brother) and the neighborhood girls, Laurie, Jenny and Diane. He never leaves the gritty, rough neighborhood even though, from the elevated subway right near his home, he can see Manhattan.

In the hot summer of 1986, he makes a new friend from Scotland, Mike, who begins to open up Dito's world to things beyond Astoria. Dito is torn between the raw, no-exit lives his friends are headed for, his loving but restrictive father who tells him he can never leave, and the dreams of a band and living in California he shares with Mike. Suddenly and senselessly, things happen to Guiseppi, Antonio and Mike which so radically shake up Dito that he takes his summer-job earnings and heads to California by bus.

The film starts in 2005, when his mother calls him in California to say she needs help with his ill father whom he hasn't seen in 15 years. The scenes cut back and forth between 2005 and 1986, and the editing is not always smooth, but the story unfolds. The young Dito is sensitively played by Shia LaBeouf and the older Dito, with his suppressed demons, is portrayed by Robert Downey Jr. Chazz Palmenteri is an overwhelmingly powerful presence as Montiel Sr. and Dianne Wiest is soft, loving and repressed in the underwritten role of Dito's mother, Flori.

The other "saints" in Dito's life he pays tribute to for shaping his character include his troubled friend Antonio, given a strong portrayal by Channing Tatum, and his first girlfriend Laurie, played with a maturity beyond her young years by Melonie Diaz and, as the older Laurie, Rosario Dawson. Dito even learns from the gay, druggie dog-walker Frank, movingly played by Anthony DeSando.

Postscript: Dito is successful in California, forming a band, Gutterbug, and writing. He has made good contacts in the entertainment industry because Trudy Styler is one of the lead producers of this film and her husband, Sting, is an executive producer. A Guide To Recognizing Your Saints won two awards at this year's Sundance Film Festival. It opens in Los Angeles and New York on September 29. The Hamptons International Film Festival's schedule is to be released on its website today – www.hamptonsfilmfest.org.

HIGHLIGHTS

Labor Day weekend brings a wide variety of entertainment. The Wynton Marsalis Quintet's performance at Guild Hall has been sold out for weeks, but there are still a few tickets for the "Night of 75 Stars" on Saturday and Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton's new comedy Russian Romance on Sunday. Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has classic rock singer/guitarist Peter Frampton on Friday and comedian David Brenner on Sunday.

This is the final weekend of performances for the comedy Darwin in Malibu at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, and comedian Dave Attell is the "Comedy Club" star there on Monday. The Hampton Synagogue, Westhampton Beach, has a busy Saturday evening with Israeli Consul General Arye Mekel speaking at 6:45 p.m. and the Folksbiene Yiddish Theatre performing at 8:30 p.m. Singers/songwriters Suzanne Vega (Fri.) and Martin Sexton (Sat. & Sun.) perform at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse, and accomplished jazz vocalist Kevin Mahogany offers two shows nightly at Estia's Cantina (Thurs. & Fri.).

This is the closing weekend of the Hampton Classic Horse Show, and the Shinnecock Indian Nation invites all to its 60th Powwow this Friday through Monday. For details, read on.

THEATER and COMEDY

This is the closing weekend of Bay Street Theatre's production of Crispin Whittell's comedy Darwin in Malibu. The amusing show stars Hal Linden, Richard Easton, Neal Huff, and Anna Chlumsky. Showtimes are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., Saturday matinee at 4 p.m. and Sunday at 7 p.m. Tickets are $45-$60. On Monday at 8 p.m., Comedy Central favorite Dave Attell is the "Comedy Club" headliner ($48). All tickets are sold after 11 a.m. at the box office (631-725-9500) or online at www.baystreet.org.

Comedian David Brenner, known for his commentary on current events, takes the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's stage on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. (tickets $70-$100; call 631-288-1500 after noon or online www.whbpac.org). The Hampton Synagogue, Westhampton Beach, invites everyone to a Saturday performance by Manhattan's Folksbiene Yiddish Theatre at 8:30 p.m.(free admission). Performers include Bruce Adler, Joanne Borts, Zalmen Mlotek, and a surprise guest.

East Hampton's Guild Hall closes its 75th season with three dynamic evenings. The Wynton Marsalis Quintet's Friday performance is, alas, sold out. On Saturday, Patricia Watt produces and James Larocca directs 75 stars starting at 8 p.m. – each doing their bit – to celebrate the venerable cultural center they have graced over the years. Some of the performers are Chevy Chase (reputedly playing the piano!), Elaine Stritch, Joy Behar, Phyllis Newman, Alec Baldwin, the Wallach family (Eli, Anne Jackson, Katherine and Roberta), Bob Balaban, Dina Merrill, Itzhak Perlman……and the list goes on (tickets $60-$65). On Sunday at 8 p.m., Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton and the John Drew co-produce a staged reading of Murphy Guyer's new comedy, Russian Romance with Mercedes Ruehl, Tandy Cronyn, Gerard Doyle and Tina Jones ($18-$20).

MUSIC

The melodic and soulful songs of singer/guitarist Peter Frampton, a popular music icon since the 1970s, will be heard tonight, September 1, at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, 8:30 p.m. Tickets ($125-$175) are sold at the box office after noon (631-288-1500) or online at www.whbpac.org.

Recommended performers at local clubs and restaurants: Amagansett – Stephen Talkhouse (call 631-267-3117 for tickets) – Suzanne Vega then Nancy Atlas (Fri.), Martin Sexton then Dana Fuchs (Sat.), Martin Sexton then Dollarman (Sun.), World Party Band (next Thurs.); Estia Cantina – acclaimed jazz vocalist Kevin Mahogany with trio (Thurs. & Fri.); Montauk – Montauk Yacht Club (Fri. 3-7 p.m.), music weekends at Gurney's Inn; East Hampton – Turtle Crossing (Mama Lee & friends Fri.), Maidstone Arms (blues Wed., Jane Hastay and Peter Weiss on Fri.), Babette's (pianist Paul Gene on Sat.); Sagaponack – wine/cheese/music 5 to 7 p.m. Thurs. at Wolffer Estate Vineyards; Bridgehampton – pop standards and soft jazz at Kipling's Fri. & Sat.; jazz brunch Sun. at World Pie; music Tues. & Sun. eve at Pierre's; Sag Harbor – reggae Sun. 4-7 p.m. at B.Smith's; Southampton – music weekends at Lori's (75 Main St.) and Tugboats North Sea, jazz Sun. 4-7 p.m. at Southampton Inn; Hampton Bays – Thurs. & Fri. at Edgewater; Westhampton Beach – music at Casa Basso (Sat.), Passionfish (chef Tom Schaudel & band on Mon.), Westhampton Beach Steak House (Fri. & Sat.); Riverhead – Eastenders Coffee House (Thurs.-Mon.), Tweed's (Fri. & Sat.).

SPEAKERS

There is a reception Saturday, 5 to 7 p.m., to view fine-arts photographer Kathryn Szoka's new photo series, "Sag Harbor Is: A Photographic Celebration" at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor. The photos will illustrate a new book Sag Harbor Is: A Literary Celebration, edited by Maryann Calendrille, to be published later this month.

Ambassador Arye Mekel, Israeli consul general in New York, will speak on Saturday, 6:45 p.m. at The Hampton Synagogue, Westhampton Beach, on "Israel: Past and Future." The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

FILMS

Sag Harbor's John Jermain Library screens the BBC production of Shakespeare's The Tempest on Sunday at 4:30 p.m. There is no admission charge but arrive about 15 minutes early to get a good seat.

SPECIAL EVENTS

The Shinnecock Indian Nation's annual Powwow invites tribes in North and South America to participate in dancing and singing competitions, and display indigenous arts, crafts and foods this Friday through Monday. Some of the entertainers expected are the award-winning Thunder Bird Sisters (Shinnecock), an Oklahoma Cherokee rapper, Mexico's Tlacopar Aztec Dancers and flutist Derek Whirlwind. The Powwow features a grand-entry procession at 7 p.m. tonight and at noon and 7 p.m. on other days. Admission is $10 for adults, $7 for seniors and children. The location is the Shinnecock Reservation off Old Montauk Highway, Southampton.

The Hampton Classic Horse Show has many exciting competitions in its closing days. Friday, the $15,000 NTM Open Jumper Derby and the $50,000 Grey Goose Vodka World Cup Qualifier go on. Saturday is Cablevision Kids' Day with special acts and activities for children in the World of the Horse Exhibition Tent, and it is also the finals of the $10,000 Wolffer Estate Equitation Championship, the $25,000 Sotheby's Challenge Cup and the $15,000 WGHR Farm Junior/Amateur-owner Jumper Classic. Sunday is the finals starting with the $30,000 FTI Consulting 7-and 8-year-old Young Jumper Championship (that's a big prize for young'uns!), the $25,000 Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby, and the $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix at 2 p.m. There are many places to eat at the show, and a large section of elegant shops. General admission is $10 per person or $20 per car, with no charge for children on Saturday. Reserved grandstand seating on Sunday is an additional $15 or $25 for premium seating. More information is on the website at www.hamptonclassic.com.

MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

The Wicker Man

Thirty-three years after the chilling original comes the remake of this British pagan horror film. Neil LaBute, more famous for his showily toxic stage-plays, takes writing and directing credits here in what is a strong interpretation of a classic. The cast, headed by Nicholas Cage with support from the ever-excellent Frances Conroy, seems to be having as much fun as the audience.

Beerfest

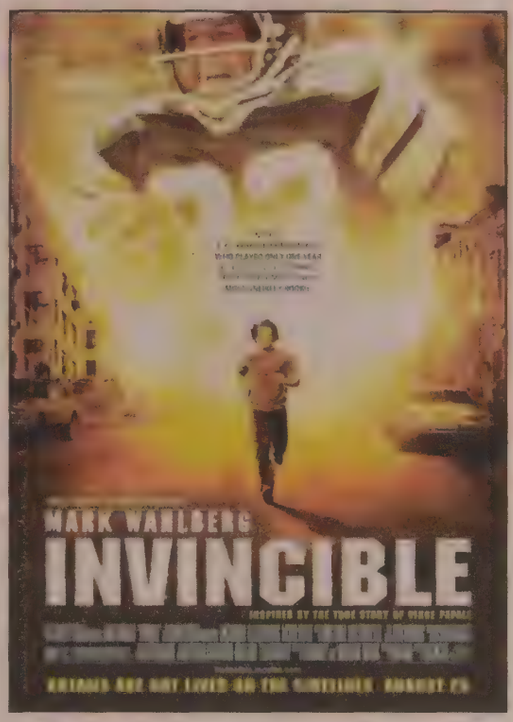
The name says it all. From the men that brought you Super Troopers comes this adventure of another type of underdog – American drinkers. Two brothers battle the world in a secret German drinking competition and the usual chaos follows. It is rated R for "pervasive crude and sexual content, language, nudity and substance abuse." You decide if you want to see it.

Crank

In an ideal world, the premise of Crank would be noxious enough to turn away most, if not all viewers: imagine Speed remade with the hero's actual heart playing the part of the bus. Yes, if Chev Chelios (Jason Statham) allows his heart rate to fall below a certain level, he will die. All of that said, though, this is guilty pleasure of the first order with enough of a tongue-in-cheek style to allow both thrills and laughs.

Crossover

Director Preston A. Whitmore II helms up this uninspired tale of teens playing basketball and striving for a future outside of violence. Noah (Wesley Jonathan) is trying to get recruited to a college team so he can study medicine while those around him are settling old debts and shooting for him to go straight to the NBA. Predictable dross.



Invincible

Mark Wahlberg stars in this true tale of the absolute underdog. A similar premise to Rock Star (also starring Wahlberg), the gripping story, though already done in every genre, is nonetheless fun and, dare I say, enjoyable. It's not everyday a bartender becomes a professional football player.

Snakes on a Plane

A crate of deadly snakes is set loose in an airplane in order to kill an eyewitness. Are you serious? Someone actually green-lighted this picture? Does Samuel Jackson even care about film anymore? I have an idea, Hanta on the Boat – mice infected with the Hantavirus are let loose on a boat in order to assassinate an Eastern European diplomat! I smell Oscar!

Material Girls

I ache just thinking about this drivel. Two sisters (Hillary and Haylie Duff) inherit their father's cosmetic company. It almost goes belly up, but instead of following the advice of the board of directors to sell out, they work hard and save the company. The plot is just like Tommy Boy but I laughed for all the wrong reasons.

Accepted

In the vain of Old School someone ends up starting something that spins wildly out of their control. Instead of thirtysomethings starting a fraternity at a college, we have a high school burnout, who couldn't get into college, creating one of his very own in order fool his parents. Does he succeed? Does he get the girl (there's always a girl)? What do you think?

Pulse

In the style of The Grudge, The Ring and, ahem, Dark Water comes this remake of an eerie Japanese modern horror film. Here the concept is that wireless technologies have made a ghoulish connection with some dark spiritual world and predictably, many pretty young things must pay the price. Horror maestro Wes Craven provides the script.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Snakes On A Plane

Ouch! Hot – hot dog! Do I have a movie for you! Just for you the great movie lovin' public, who actually pay admission to see the film. New Line Cinema, early on, announced that Snakes on a Plane was made for the audiences, not the reviewers. Oh, gee! How dear and exclusively attractive you are to the producers! To prove it, they denied advance screenings or tapes to the non-paying reviewers who are paid to be critical. So we had to wait to give our opinions. Of course, they've been leaking choice film clip tidbits to computer fanatics, like snakesonablog.com which started the SoaP craze when it first got wind of the title and went wild with delight in making fun of its stupidity.

Soon the giggles and guffaws spread as crazily as those snakes on the plane. The online cult's force was such that the film's producers listened hard, took notes and eventually took them into production with them – they added more gore, violence, foul language and lots more nudity and sex. To heck with the PG-Rating. An R-Rating was just fine thank you, after all, Samuel L Jackson had been part of the movie's package from the start. He too loved the title. He said "Think of the Sequels: Snakes on a Bus, Snakes on Your Mama!" Also, the R-rating gives him full vent to his elaborate use of expletives.

That title, Snakes on a Plane, has reached a near iconic status. It totally describes itself. You might call the title high-concept. Chatters and bloggers aside, it tickles you like having a snake in your knickers. Amusing or not, it is uncomfortable, to say the least. Pity the poor, rank B-movie cast of passengers attacked in R-rated fashion. Plenty of their body parts are bared, so any dangling parts are subject to greedy fangs. The unimaginable variety of herpetology subjects also hide and seek with avid curiosity and quickly find any and every orifice in the body in which to enter and exit. Isn't this all too hilarious? Exciting? Sure, but after the um-teenth surprise attack in surprising places (parts of the plane and bodies) the serpents shtick becomes a given and trouble with the pilot and the plane are called upon for suspense. Say, tell me, how come all women's breasts that are bared are va-va-voom! And wouldn't it figure that it's a male who sits on the john containing a you-know-what. Oh, m' gosh will this give a vengeful wife ideas on how to give their hubbies what for! for leaving the toilet seat up? Boy, oh boy! This movie has far-reaching meanings and repercussions. The absolute worst being a send up spoof of the September 11th film United 93. Well, the number of September 11th films and TV shows have thrown the doors open to any one. When Mr. Jackson arrived in Vancouver, B.C. to begin shooting, he found the title was now Pacific Air 121. He hit Ceiling Zero! They wanted the movie to be taken seriously. Do you believe it?

Here is its "serious" plot. Mr. Jackson is an FBI agent flying from Honolulu to the States with a witness who can convict an awful gangster, Eddie (Byron Lawson). The witness is Sean (Nathan Phillips) and the gangster is so determined to keep fink Sean from getting to Los Angeles, he packs up hundreds of those creepy crawlers in boxes computerized to open in mid-flight. To make sure, he hypes them up with pheromones. As Jackson put it, "Whoa! Snakes on Crack!"

As New Line Cinema stated, this movie is for the audiences of cool summertime entertainment who have sat through those multi-million dollar, three-hour blockbusters that managed only to move your backside. You had to move them because they had petrified like your brain. What's wrong with that? I don't really know, but it worries me that some production companies are encouraging 18 hours-a-day users of the Internet to help "create" new movies since SoaP was helped by them, so much. Example: originally a couple was necking in a lavatory. Redone, they are qualifying for membership in the Mile-High Club. How creative can you get?

Twentieth Century Fox has reached out for youth online junkies with a label titled Fox Atomic. The title alone scares me. Will it demolish movie making as we know it? I know titles can have more power than we think.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer / writer / director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. Sarah Halsey assists him.

MAYOR ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Factotum (-)

This film relentlessly depicts the lives of individuals on skid row who are addicted to alcohol and make no attempt to improve their lives.

A man in his 40s, Henry (Matt Dillon), a hopeful writer who sends out stories but rarely checks his mail, moves from one menial job to another and can't hold on to any of them. When he goes to his parents' home for a respite, he is welcomed by his mother but thrown out by his dad.

Jan (Lili Taylor) is obsessed with liquor and sex. She roams from bar to bar and from man to man. Laura (Marisa Tomei) is also one of Henry's sex partners who, in the world of drunks, appears to be one step above Jan.

Matt Dillon and Lili Taylor are fine actors. I have long admired their work, especially Dillon's recent role in Crash and his earlier performance as a youth in The Flamingo Kid, and Taylor's spectacular role in the television show "Six Feet Under." Marisa Tomei is also a good actress, but her role in this film adds little to the movie's overall attraction.

At the end of the film I thought to myself, thank God I don't like liquor, generally, for social purposes, limiting myself to wine. If you are interested in seeing some fine acting or want to immerse yourself in the study of alcoholism, you might want to see this movie. But if you are out for an evening of entertainment and pleasure, "Factotum" is not the film to see.

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Discovering Clean Country Living

Living out in the country has its benefits in comparison to living in the city. There are the obvious things when it comes to your health. There is the fact that there is less pollution in the country and of course, the healing powers of the ocean are ever present. Many people that live full time out in the country don't have to experience the noise of car alarms going off while they are trying to get to sleep.

When it comes to your health, as in not dying and not getting sick, the city is not a very friendly place. For one thing, the stress that many people feel in the city just from physically being there contributes greatly to poor health. Stress is a very powerful force, and because city life can often be aggravating, many city people can feel run down a lot of the time, and be more prone to heart disease and other stress related illnesses.

The country can be a little bit slower moving and it is important for a stressed out city person to relax in the country. Sometimes, this seems impossible, just based on a personality type. But very, very few people feel stress while they are lying down on the beach and soaking up the ocean air and sun's rays. This type of relaxation can feel foreign to a city person because they are so used to feeling pressure weighing down on them. However, it is important to remember that slowing down may be vital to your overall health and well-being, and it's worth a try. If you do not take the time to relax, you are putting yourself at risk.

The city does have its benefits when it comes to your health. Many people that live in the city are able to get a lot of exercise by walking from place to place, and using the stairs in apartments.

However, much of that walking time is spent heading out to late night places at all hours of the night. Being on the go all night long, then walking into a stressful job is not good for your body, and it lets you know that it is not good for you by making you feel sick.

Pollution in the city is also unhealthy. There are many stories about a country person moving into the city and getting terrible cough and flu like symptoms based completely on the added pollution that goes into their lungs. Just breathing in the country air is healthy.

The country is also very good for your emotional health, a connection that is really being investigated in the medical field. Keeping your mind and soul healthy, studies have shown, is just as important as keeping your body healthy. This is because there are clear connections between your mental well being and your physical health. When life moves at a simpler pace, as it does in the country, you have fewer obvious things to worry about which contributes to your emotional health. Country living allows you to be outdoors with nature and lets you become more in tune with the environment that contributes to your mental health as well.

Although the Hamptons is very much a circus for some people, for most of us, especially those that are not from here, it is a place to relax and enjoy the natural beauty. This is the reason that it is what is it is. It's important for your health too! People have been benefiting from these surroundings for hundreds of years. It's just that the science simply wasn't there to prove it.

So the next time that you are out on your porch enjoying a summer barbecue with fresh vegetables and fruit bought from local growers and the sound of good friends getting together for some fresh air and fresh food, remind yourself that you are doing good things for your body and soul as well as having fun.

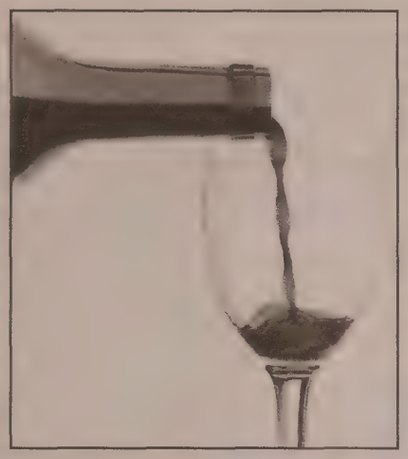
The Wine Debate

There are so many health and nutrition facts floating around popular culture that I sometimes feel like people just choose the facts that legitimize their activities. I am certainly guilty of this. I am constantly peaching that some research shows coffee is good for your heart, but I choose not to mention any information I've read about blood pressure. But this lovely Sunday evening, as I curled my fingers around a glass of red wine, I thought, "I really need to find out the truth about wine." We've all heard that a glass every night is good for you, but there are plenty of sources that say it's not. I find it almost too good to be true that having a glass of red wine every night is physically good for you, considering it is so clearly beneficial to your mentality (she says as she swirls the Pinot Noir in its glass, a sly grin forming on her lips).

Just as with anything else in life, there are two sides to every story. The effects of wine are no different. While it is true that there are many benefits, which I will expand upon later, there are also some negative effects of consuming alcohol on a daily basis. The average wine contains between 11 and 14% alcohol. Alcohol has toxic properties that can be damaging to the liver and brain. More than three glasses of wine can seriously impair your reflexes and your judgment. And obviously, drinking excessive amounts and then driving is extremely dangerous. So with all of the benefits, you do need to be aware of the drawbacks.

But now, let's return to the purpose of this column: to champion the wino! Wine inhibits the growth of microorganisms in your body, and many of these microorganisms spawn disease. There has been a great deal of research worldwide that proves that drinking a moderate amount of red wine every day reduces the risk of heart attacks. Dr Serge Renaud, of the French National Institute of Health and Medical Research, explained in a paper that "wine contains phenolic compounds like reservatrol and flavonoids." These compounds are present in grape skins, stems and seeds, and they are antioxidants. When you eat grapes, you consume the skins, but you generally don't eat the stems or the seeds. In the wine-making process, however, the good antioxidants from the stems and seeds are still present. By consuming more antioxidants, you are improving your cholesterol. There are two kinds of cholesterol: HDL and LDL. HDL is good, and LDL is bad. The oxidation of LDL in your blood stream results in the clogging of the arteries, which can cause heart attacks. Red wine contains flavonoids that slow down this process, and beef up the good cholesterol and reduce the bad.



Another fascinating study that will serve to legitimize your affinity for wine was conducted in Copenhagen over the span of 11 years. From 1976 to 1988, over 13,000 men and women between ages 30 and 70 were tracked. It was discovered that those who drank between three and five glasses of wine every day reduced their risk fof death by a heart attack by HALF. When the results of this study were published, Danes started drinking a lot more red wine. Today, Danes drink 30% more red wine than they used to, and the instance of heart diseases in Denmark has decreased by 30% in that time. Coincidence? I think not, I say as the wine drains from my glass.

Studies have proven that the flavonoids present in red wine slow down the regeneration of harmful platelets that can cause strokes. In 1995, Dietary Guidelines for Americans stated that drinking red wine in moderation may reduce the risk of coronary heart disease among men 45 and over, and women 65 and older. In recent years, major organizations like the World Health Organization and the Center for Nutrition at the Harvard Medical School and Public Health have included red wine as a part of a healthy diet.

These facts just scrape the surface of the research that has been done on the health aspects of red wine. And why are we all so interested in it? Because having a glass of wine is a fabulous way to kick back and unwind, and we want to feel like we are taking care of ourselves even when we indulge. So, take these facts to your next dinner party and raise a glass to your health. Salud!

Go Fish

The Weather Gods were not with local fishermen at the beginning of the week, but there are still impressive results from the August fishing tournaments. The sixth annual Hamptons Offshore Invitational Tournament sponsored by the Shinnecock Marlin and Tuna Club had its weigh-ins at Oakland Marina and Restaurant, Hampton Bays. Here are some of the winners:

Day Fishing

Big-eye tuna – Spellman's Marine (Doug Wells) 135 lbs.

Yellowfin tuna – Mikat II (Mike Dixon) 60 lbs.

Albacore – Morning Belle (Joseph Larucci) 40 lbs

Overnight Fishing

Big-Eye Tuna – High Life (William Conran) 230 lbs.

Albacore – Reel Fun (Rick Fayer) 62.5 lbs.

In the catch-and-release marlin competition, John Schmilt of Complicated Lady hooked a white marlin, and Mike and Chuck Forman of the Sandra Jenny hooked a blue marlin in day fishing. Cathy's Choice hooked three white marlin on the overnight trip, and Reel Fun had two catch-and-release blue marlin.

On-line (Skip Stritziger) 33.9 lb. striped bass; On-line (Skip Stritziger) 13.85 lb. bluefish; Bite Me (Ed Eurell) 10 lb. fluke.

There can be substantial payouts in major fishing tournaments even though the entry fees are pretty steep. For example, at the White Marlin Open in Ocean City, Maryland, the white marlin winning boat had an 82-lb. fish and won $1, 552,000. The winning blue marlin of 730 lbs. brought $660,172.

In other fishing reports, Carl at Montauk Marine Basin says Sea Wife brought in a 250-lb. mako shark last Saturday and another boat caught 16 yellowfin tuna. Bill at Star Island Marina notes there were large tuna caught at the Mud Hole about 17 miles off Montauk Point. Fishermen on the Viking Fleet boats said the wind and seas subsided after 10 a.m. last Saturday, the sun came out and they caught fluke, seabass and porgies off Block Island.

Steve at Wego Fishing Station, Southold, reports big porgies and large bluefish off Gardiner's Island and Plum Island. The Orient Star's clients caught porgies, seabass and bluefish late last Saturday afternoon at Plum Gut and Pigeon's Rip.

Harvey Bennett of The Tackle Shop, Amagansett – who also is a bike marathoner – tells us there was a big run of shad off the beach being chased by striped bass from Gurney's Inn to Indian Wells Beach, and a few fortunate surfcasters, using tin lures, caught some bass.

The reports from Shinnecock Bay are positively poetic. Seamonster writes the water is "bubbling with baitfish and snapper," and Capt. Don Kaye writes "striped bass were busting bait at sun-up.....and alligator bluefish added to the exciting mix." Send your fish tales, pictures and questions to yeoldesalt@aol.com.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is geniunely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

Not by the Hair on My . . . Head?

I have learned the hard way that it is never a good idea to publicly announce one's intention of getting a haircut. Hair is a funny, fickle thing, with pieces sometimes darting out wildly that you must attempt to bring order to with the hopes of looking good and the fear of looking worse. And I began with The Blob. The Blob was the hair that sat on my head lifelessly before this past Wednesday. The Blob is a hair style that is long and untamed, allowing for it to be casually flicked aside with one's hand. Younger people tend to like The Blob, while parents tend to hate it. Today's Blob was made popular by Julian Casablancas of The Strokes. Bonus points if The Blob is greasy.

But I let my Blob fall to a white tiled floor and be swept up and thrown out by a barber's young intern. The Blob had its pitfalls – for me, it was the constant insecurity of knowing that there was a mess of hair behind my head that I could not see – not even in a mirror! Thinking of the tangled hirsute mess on the back of my head and neck, I was no longer able to live with The Blob.

Unfortunately, now I have The Hat. The Hat is what happens when you tell your haircutter "not that short" and he or she has a different definition of "short" than you do. The Hat comes about when somebody takes a razor on level 4 to the The Blob. It is quite short – deeply buzzed sides, thin, square top, and no sideburns or facial hair. Its tidiness makes it almost the anti-Blob. However, beware: The Blob tends to make eyes look dark and faces tired and shadowed. Some may not like this look, but when they get it cut, there will be a sudden re-emerging of their features.

"What? My forehead is that big? And is that a blackhead?" comes to mind. Cutting The Blob short will take your face out of the shadows, but the change may be too abrupt for you to stomach, leading you to wear a hat that will once again shadow your face and cover your uncomfortably short hair.

When your hair begins to grow out after your too-short haircut, it may be time to spice things up with a Faux Hawk. A FauxHawk is like a Mohawk except for people who would never actually get a Mohawk. A FauxHawk can be accomplished by simply putting a lot of gel on your medium-length hair and using your hands and fingers to point the hair in the center of your head upwards, forming a vertical line or a wave. FauxHawks were really popular for the younger set at the turn of the century, since they were bold without being scary. It is never too late for one to spend a few days with a FauxHawk though.

For the truly hip set, the new trend is to go T-Bird style. Wait until your hair has grown out some and then gel it all back, like Danny in Grease and other fictional or actual men from the late 50s. This look is great, albeit kind of ridiculous. Few can pull it off, but those that can are greatly rewarded by some coy, pleased glances in the mirror and some extra attention.

For guys who want stylish hair in a more conventional look, there are "parts." Many men part down the middle, splitting their hair evenly and letting it fall gently on both sides. Then there is the front flip, when you gel your hair to form a wall in the front and leave the rest alone. I don't really recommend this because it reminds me of middle school. For a clean, good look, I recommend the side flip. To create the side flip, take a tiny bit of gel and push your hair off to either the right or the left side. Then run your hands through your hair, mess it up a little bit, and call it a good hair day. If you insist on going with a more business approach, then, of course, part your hair on the left side and let the rest fall horizontally across your head.

If you are lucky enough to have curly hair, then let it grow. Curly hair in a Blob never looks bad or weird like straight hair can. However, if you cut curly hair too short, you may end up looking like Corey Matthews in his high school days.

Getting your hair cut can be quite daunting. But it is definitely necessary, or else your short hair cut becomes The Blob which becomes a really long mess of hair on your head. Get it cut! However, make sure you repeat: not too short!

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Don't Forget Your PGs

At this time in the season, many landscapes are starting to look somewhat spent and withered, having succumbed to the strong heat, sun and winds of August. Lucky for gardeners, one of the faster growing shrubs provides late season appeal and splash when very few garden plants are in bloom. One hydrangea (Hydrangea paniculata) is a favorite in the Hamptons at this time of year, producing large white blooms up to eight inches long and four inches in diameter at the base. The flowers bloom for several weeks in late summer and early fall.

Often referred to as the "PeeGee Hydrangea" (a contraction of the scientific name which is Paniculata Grandiflora Hydrangea) this plant produces an excellent specimen shrub or small tree. Next to the Nikko blue hydrangeas (Hydrangea macrophylla) that blooms in June/July, the PeeGee is the most commonly planted hydrangea because of its massive displays of flowers in late summer. Today's plants are quite similar to an old form of hydrangea that was introduced into cultivation in the 1860s. (Obviously, quality lasts!)

The PeeGee Hydrangea is a deciduous shrub that belongs, as do other varieties, to the Hydrangeacea family of plants. Because it is suited to Zones 3 through 8, it is an ideal plant for the Hamptons. It has only moderate watering requirements and is even moderately salt tolerant, so survives near the beach. If cultivated as a bush, the plant can spread to a width of up to 16 feet and attain heights of up to 20 feet or more.

PeeGee is a vigorous, upright, rapidly growing, somewhat coarsely textured specimen plant. The conical flowers consist almost entirely of sterile florets that are tightly grouped together. (If the flowering buds are thinned to about five to eight shoots on the plant early on in the season, even larger flowers can be achieved that measure up to 18 inches long.) The flowers themselves are a vibrant, creamy white that stand out against the oval, medium green leaves. They slowly age to pink as the season progresses. In full bloom, the weight of the blooms typically causes the branches to arch downward, creating a striking effect.

At the end of the season, the flowers fade to brown or tan and will persist well into late fall or early winter. If picked when dry, the blooms are a great addition to traditional flower displays that will easily last through winter.

The PeeGee hydrangea is best grown in organically rich, well-drained soil. A full sun to partial shade location is ideal. Soil needs to be consistently moist for the plant to do well. For the best success, dig a hole about six inches wider than the root ball. Remove any root ball covering (burlap), and amend the soil with peat, compost, and a starter fertilizer before back-filling. (This provides sufficient nutrition to give the plant a winning start.) Water well for the first several weeks to help the plant get established.

Unlike the Nikko blues that bloom on the previous season's growth, the PeeGee blooms on the current season's growth. The plant can be pruned in late fall, winter, or early spring. Pruning involves removal of dead flowers and annual corrective pruning of shoots. You may thin and/or cut back the previous season's growth to shape the plant to your preference. The plant can be trained to a single trunk tree or as a large, multi-stemmed shrub. (We are particularly fond of the tree shape for this hydrangea, wherein the cascading flowers and branches can create a stunning specimen on a lawn or at the back of the border.)

There are really no serious insect or disease problems with the PeeGee. As with other garden plants, aphids, mites, and scale can be issues, and need to be attended to immediately if spotted. The PeeGee can also be susceptible to some blight, leaf spot, rust, and mildew problems. Placement in areas that have adequate wind ventilation, therefore, help avoid these issues.

Frankly, we cannot imagine a summer garden without at least one specimen of the PeeGee. While some may snub their noses at a plant with white flowers that seem somewhat traditional, there is no more striking or inspiring sight that a PeeGee in full bloom against the green background of late summer. This plant is certainly worthy of consideration for every garden!

Tile To Make You Smile

You've decided that you want to redo your kitchen or bathroom and you need to find the right tile for the job. Well, all types of tile are being used throughout the home these days – from inexpensive glazed ceramic to tumbled natural stone. The choices are endless. So, you will want to approach this task by first choosing the right tile for the proper application.

Please bear in mind that all tiles are not created equal. This being the case, you will want to choose durable ceramic or porcelain tile for high traffic areas, like the kitchen and foyer. Natural stone tile works best in a kitchen backsplash or as a chair rail border. You should check with the tile manufacturer to determine the recommended application.

Personally, I have found that, of all the tiles, ceramic tile is the most easily maintained, durable, and attractive. Ceramic is a man-made product. Each and every tile has the identical composition and therefore has predictable qualities. On the other hand, stone tile (granite, slate, marble) is a product of nature and can differ in composition from tile to tile and therefore has unpredictable qualities. Ceramic tiles are generally non-porous to slightly porous with a very low absorbency. Stone tiles can be very absorbent and for this reason can cause several different setting problems. Marble, for example, is very sensitive to acids, whereas ceramic tile is not.

Whatever type of tile you choose for your home, you should strive to create an interesting pattern by mixing different sizes, colors and textures. Take samples and rearrange them to determine which pattern works best. Most importantly, whether creating a symmetrical floor pattern or an irregular wall border, remember to take accurate measurements to make the best use of the materials. When installing tile in a small room, use larger tile to make the room seem more spacious. Not only will it open up the room, you will have less grout to clean.

Tile can be used in all types of design styles, from rustic to contemporary. Use it on walls, floors, countertops, backsplashes and tabletops and create artwork with mosaics and relief tiles. Inject personality into a basic white tile floor with a broken tile border or liven up an ordinary vanity mirror with an intricate mosaic pattern. Let your imagination be your guide!

Tiles are available in many sizes. The recent trend has been toward larger tiles for floor and wall applications. 13" x 13" is a popular size for floors and 8" x 10" is the most popular size for walls. The up and coming sizes are 16" x 16" for floors and 8" x 12" for walls. Why? Because, as mentioned earlier, larger tiles make a space appear larger. Some floor tiles come in multiple sizes, which allow the creation of interesting patterns.

Of course, only you can decide what color is right for you, but here are a few basic rules to remember: Lighter colors make a space appear larger. Darker colors add warmth and hide dirt well. Neutral colors allow you to change your accessories but if you love a trendy color, go for it! Just keep in mind that it will be with you a long time.

Generally speaking, textured or matte finish tiles are less slippery than smooth or shiny tiles – something you should keep in mind when choosing floor tiles. A tile's "slip resistance" is measured by its "coefficient of friction," which is provided by some manufacturers.

Rustic or stone-looking tiles are extremely popular because they fit in with any decor and are excellent at hiding dirt. Marbleized tiles lend a more formal look. Tumbled marble is a popular look for all types of decor. Glass tiles and metallic looks are now frequently used in conjunction with ceramic tile and natural stone to create a unique and striking installation. Italianate mosaic tiles like Florentine iridescent glass and Venetian enhanced vitreous glass are stunning, and will add great beauty to your kitchen or bath.

And let's not forget about grout. Grout is available in a wide variety of colors. Using a grout that matches the tile tends to make the grout lines disappear. Using a contrasting color makes the individual tiles stand out.

With so many styles of tile to choose from, finding the "right" tile can seem daunting. If this is the case, you may want to consult with a professional interior designer for helpful suggestions. To get more information go to www.infotile.com. or www.interiordec.about.com

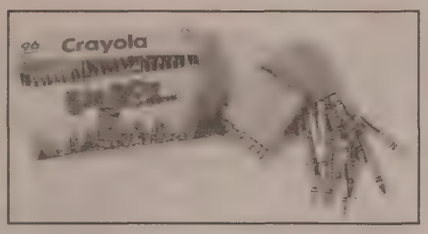
Color Me PC



Marketing is a nine letter word, but if enough corporate executives thought that a six letter version would sell better, the dictionary would probably eventually spell it "mrktng." Or, if enough people from the coalition of people offended by nine letter words wrote angry letters, the same result would occur. This unique supply and demand marketing is proved nowhere better than in the history of Crayola colors, and it teaches interesting interior design lessons, as it poses the question: what's in a name?

It was 1903 when the company Binney & Smith conceived Crayola crayons. (Named by Alice Binney, "crayola" is a combination of the French words for "chalk" and "oily".) In this box of wax color sticks – a novel idea at the time – were the simple crayon colors "Black, Brown, Orange, Violet, Blue, Green, Red, and Yellow." However, when the 1950s industrial revolutions saw the rise of companies, corporations, and the general economy, eight colors for a successful crayon company was suddenly absurdly simple; it just wasn't making as much money as it could have been with, say,..... 48 colors. Hence the addition of "colors" such as Apricot, Bittersweet, Burnt Sienna, Maize, and Cornflower.

Were these colors necessary? Although they certainly stray from the initial color wheel – which is made up of essentially the only actual colors – they did allow for more artistic creativity. Equally creative, however, are some of the names given to these color mixes and hybrids. Bittersweet? That's still arguable as a feeling, let alone a color. But with 48 colors, the Crayola crayon company continued to boom. They are the go-to supplies for a vast majority of elementary schools and even homes. Names that seem initially like marketing ploys – cerulean, salmon, thistle – have actually slowly become embedded into our culture as legitimate colors, hues, or shades.

And then they were 72. And that's where Crayola started to get really creative with consumers. The suspecting, sardonic artists out there can almost picture the marketing meeting at which an executive announced "alliteration sells!" and "Wild Watermelon" and "Blizzard Blue" were born.

Many Crayola names were also changed due to the idea of being "politically correct" – as well as just inoffensive. The most famous case of this is the Crayola color "Flesh," created in the 1950s. "Flesh" was a peach color, matching the skin of a Caucasian. But in 1962, during the U.S. Civil Rights Movement, the company voluntarily changed the name to "Peach," proclaiming that, of course, not all flesh is peach (but all peaches are). Similar changes were made to "Prussian Blue," which was changed to Commie Blue – er, "Midnight Blue" in 1958 and "Indian Red," which was finally changed, after large-scale protests, to "Chestnut" in 1999. Interestingly enough, although "Indian Red" was changed to "Chestnut" because it was considered offensive to Native Americans, the name actually originated from a reddish-brown pigment found near India commonly used in fine artist oil paint. It was not meant in reference to Native Americans, but to the country India. So, many have asked, who is really being un-PC, assuming that the term "Indian" still always refers to Native Americans?

When decorating your Hamptons home, consider the colors you choose. Or, rather, consider what you refer to them as. You may buy a blue couch, but do you want to tell people it's "Midnight Blue," "Cerulean," or just plain blue? Crayon conservatives still seem to prefer "blue" and often resent the changes made to their childhood colors, while those who prefer haute, upscale names may want the most up-to-date name possible. The same interesting color names used by Crayola are now seen at almost all furniture stores – rarely will a furniture vendor or brand refer to its latest couch as just "red." Red is suddenly drab, instead of as vibrant as it is on a color wheel. Instead, it's "razzle dazzle red" or "lipstick red" or "fuchsia." Oooh..... fuchsia.

I recommend choosing one theme or the other: super cool color names or super simple color names. Do not tell your houseguest that he is sleeping on a "gray bed with midnight black and mahogany throw pillows." It seems to work better with either all ornate names or all original names. The question I pose, and I am the first to pose it, is: what's in a name? For Crayola, everything: a business; an offensive term, a best-selling epithet. But should consumers see it the same way? Some color names can be fun; some colors can be interesting hybrids; but remember that in the end they all stem from the same wheel.

Chic on the Cheap

Now that summer is winding down, the everyday grind will start picking up. Vacations will soon be over, kids are going back to school, and the weather is cooling down. This is usually the time when people get lazy around the house and starting letting stacks of old mail and magazines pile up on the counter. The grass grows very high around the property, and the house starts to become a mess. However, this year, don't fall into that trap. Let this be the year that your home stays in tiptop shape.

When most people think about maintaining their home and making it look elegant, it is often thought that it will be a costly endeavor. But that does not have to be the case. There are numerous ways to make your house classy, while keeping the money in your wallet. Once your house is in perfect form and you have saved lots of money, you will want to use the extra cash to entertain and show off your new pad.

An obvious way to save money is to do the work yourself. Since first impressions are extremely important, it is essential to manicure your lawn, trim overgrown hedges, and plant flowers around the entrance of your house. This may require a lawn mower, hedge clippers, and a trip to the local nursery, or maybe even the work of local gardeners. The total cost after buying a used lawn mower and hedge clippers and flowers will be a couple hundred dollars, but the outcome will be well worth the small price to pay, especially if you can borrow the tools from a neighbor. After all, curb appeal is crucial.

While your guests are walking up your beautiful path, seeing flowers bloom in the garden, and the shining freshly cut grass, the next thing they will notice will be the house itself. Therefore, make sure the house has been painted recently. If you do the scraping, priming, and painting around the house and on the front door yourself, you will give your house a nice look and save lots of money. A nice touch for the front door would be to have a welcome mat and a seasonal wreath hanging from the door. An excellent way to use what you already have would be to make the wreath from yard clippings.

Fancy numerals hanging by the front door will work well, too. The numbers will also come in handy when your guests are shocked by your home's new aesthetic appeal and do a double take to make sure it is actually your house. After they see the numbers, the guests will know they are not mistaken and are at your new and improved digs.

Once the outside area blows your guests away, don't lose them when they enter your home. After all, this is where you live, so it should be nice. Flowers in a vase on the kitchen table will add life to your house as well as color. Shabby Chic furniture is in style, but instead of buying the expensive furniture, just buy used furniture that looks Shabby Chic. You'll save money and be trendy. A good place to buy furniture, such as a brass bed, and other trinkets for the home are at garage sales all around the Hamptons. There are some good items being sold for inexpensive prices every weekend at the yard sales.

Using what you already have is key. For those of you who enjoy pasta sauce in a jar, take the Mason jar and glue the lids to a wooden plank. Then mount the wood as a shelf and store anything in the jars, whether it will be tea in the kitchen, buttons in the laundry room, or nails in the garage.

In the bedroom, buy two sets of inexpensive sheets. Sleep on one set – they can be hidden from the critical visitor with a fancy bedspread and pillowcase, and only you have to know you're cuddled up in a bargain. The other set of sheets can turn into matching window treatments with a little work, if you know how to sew. Fresh curtains will add to the bedroom. Framed artwork or photos you have taken will add to the room and impress others with your skill. And don't forget to put fresh towels and potpourri in the bathroom.

Now that the maintenance to your home is complete, sit back and enjoy a glass of wine. Just make sure that you keep the bottle and put it on the windowsill as a decoration. Remember, a good way to save money is to use what you already have.

Brighter is Better

It is late August and the chilly nip of fall is in the air. I should be tanning and fishing but I am looking out my window at sheets of gray rain, and I am listening to the weatherman forecast at least four more days of the same. When the weather or anything else starts to get you down, there are a few easy things you can do. Since rainy days will have you trapped inside, you might as well make your home as sunny and cheerful as possible. Whether you have a weekend, a few hours, or just a few minutes, you can brighten up your room and your outlook in many ways.

The simplest way is with a great bouquet of flowers. Take advantage of the summer months at local farm stands and buy a big bunch of sunflowers- they will really brighten up the room. A tall, yellow bouquet of sunflowers will make a bold, happy statement. Any flowers will go a long way in the effort to make your room sunnier, but if you are looking for a slightly more long-lasting effect, buy a flowering houseplant. A big tropical potted palm would certainly lift your spirits. Try some vines, or ivy – a little bit of nature inside makes a dark room look like a secret garden.

If you have a few hours on your hands, a simple rearrangement of furniture in the room will freshen it up. It will allow you to look at things in a new way and get your creative juices flowing. Liven up your room by trying new angles or arrangements for your furniture. Move your bed or favorite chair over by the window. Borrow throw pillows from other rooms to instantly change the look of your bed. Search the home for scarves, tablecloths, linens, or napkins to use in creative ways. Drape a bright table runner over a dresser top. Spread a colorful napkin on your bedside table. Throw a beautiful shawl at the end of your bed.

A single super-bright accessory added to a room can completely change the feel of it. Be on the lookout for great art that makes you feel happy, or paint your own picture as a therapeutic rainy-day project. Candles with tropical scents add warmth and inspiration to a room. To really brighten your outlook, choose a few photos of hilarious moments or loved one that really make you smile. Frame them in a colorful assortment of frames and place them around the room. Your smile as you look at these will light up the room you're in.

For more substantial room-brightening changes, think about these options. Paint your room a vivid yellow. Paint the trim and doors white. It is a quick and easy weekend project that will add some serious sunshine to your day. Lots of natural light is the best way to banish gloom from your room. If you can get a room with skylights, or have them installed then you are in luck. If this isn't an option, there are a few ways to maximize the available light in your room. Place mirrors near windows or directly across from them. This reflects light into the room, and opens it up by giving the appearance of more windows. Choose a minimal window covering such as a sheer curtain or simply a valance. This allows as much light as possible into the room. If you are still plagued by a lack of natural light, start playing with the lighting scheme in your room. Rearrange and angle light to brighten up a dark corner or reading nook. Illuminate that great piece of art with a spotlight. Buy a decorative lamp that adds drama and interest and, of course, light.

When the dog days of summer are depressing, or the world just seems against you, don't let it get you down. There are so many creative ways to brighten up a room that can provide a private retreat from traffic, rain or an angry boss. If you can surprise someone with a bunch of daisies you might make their day. If you smile and feel uplifted every time you look around your home, then you will bring that sunny disposition to everyone you encounter. Brighten up your room and you begin to brighten up the world.

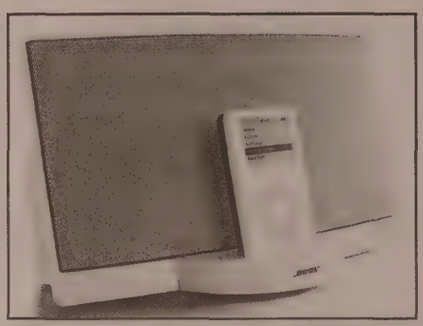
New For You and iPod

For growing numbers of people, the days of grand stereo systems are over, thanks to a variety of accessories for the iPod (and its cousins the Shuffle and the Nano), including small but powerful speakers. Even Bose, perhaps the most well-known and respected manufacturer of high quality yet small speaker systems, has gotten into the act. Or, if you want to play your iPod through your existing full-scale stereo system, there are accessories for that as well.

The Bose SoundDock Digital Music System looks almost like a small flat-panel TV, but with speaker mesh instead of an LCD screen. Framed in jet black or iPod white, the Bose speaker system promises "full sound" to "bring your music to life," and customer reviews enthusiastically back up this claim. Your iPod rests in the system's docking station, which keeps the iPod charged. The $299.95 price includes a basic remote control for the iPod.

The iPod HiFi, an Apple product, gets equally good customer reviews. Although the body shape is less sleek and it costs $50 more than the Bose, it has the benefit of being completely portable with six D-sized batteries. (Of course, it is plugged in when at home.) With promised "natural, room-filling sound with clear stereo separation" and a remote control, this box could render the large stereo system obsolete.

A less expensive but fun accessory replaces your alarm clock. Want to wake up to Coldplay instead of morning radio chatter? The iHome iH5 for iPod alarm system, for $99.95, will play from your iPod, gradually increasing the volume to wake you up gently. The sleep function acts the same way but in reverse, gradually decreasing the volume as you drift off. A useful feature allows you to set the sleep volume independently from the wake up volume. Plus, if you forget to put your iPod in the docking station, a buzzer will sound when it is time to wake up. Although quite small, customer reviews indicate that the device promotes decent enough sound that some people use the system throughout the day.



If you have a complete stereo system but no way to play songs from your iPod, you can buy the Griffin RoadTrip transmitter. It plugs into your iPod and sends a signal to your FM receiver. With the included software, you can select the station frequency that will be receiving the music, and then you just set your receiver to that station. This product works best outside of large cities, as it is important to find a station that is virtually silent. The Griffin RoadTrip transmitter also works in your car (hence, the name), and comes with a charger that plugs into the car's cigarette lighter. The device sells for $89.95.

If you live in a large city with a crowded FM dial so that the Griffin RoadTrip transmitter doesn't work well, you can buy the Sony CPA-9C Car Cassette Adapter – that is, if you still have a cassette player. Plugging into both your iPod and the cassette deck, the $19.95 adapter allows your iPod's music to be played in your home or car stereo system. Of course, using either this adapter or the Griffin RoadTrip transmitter will result in some loss in sound quality, but at least all of your existing stereo systems become compatible with your iPod.

Of course, there will be times when you want to have your iPod on the go. Runners will appreciate any one of the various available sports arm bands. Generally costing between $29 and $35, they allow you to secure your iPod to your arm rather than having to hold on to it (inevitably dropping it) while you exercise. Keeping the little ear plug headphones in your ears is another matter. Fortunately, there are all sorts of ear headphones available for active iPod users, including the Nike Vapor Sport Bud Headphones ($24.95), which have an eye-glasses-like ear hook to keep the little plugs in place.

And with the holidays approaching much faster than one would expect, consider putting the Apple iPod Socks in your loved-one's stocking. Coming in a set for $29, each one of the six brightly-colored knit sleeves will protect your iPod from even the most klutzy users and at the same time announce to the world that fashion knows no bounds.

A Walk to Remember

In "Widow's Walk," Suzanne Vega – who will be playing at the Talkhouse September 1st – sings "That line is the horizon. We watch the wind and set the sail, but save ourselves when all omens point to fail." It's a song about divorce, but Vega's metaphor references a very real piece of architectural history. Before the days of Greenpeace and Free Willy, whales were great monsters of the sea. They were to be hunted and exploited. The oceans ran red with blood. As demonstrated by Melville's Ahab and his battle with the giant white sperm whale called "Moby Dick," the life of a whaler was no picnic. It was not uncommon for these men to labor for seemingly infinite hours while enduring paltry rations and cramped, disgusting quarters. Some men made great fortunes, while others died. Houses were erected along the shore and the captains once again set sail to claim their bounty. It was on these houses, where the women waited, that the widow's walk was born.

Gone sometimes for many, many months, the whalers' lives were in danger, even when not faced with a thrashing, angry whale. Disease, weather, and myriad other terrible fates waited hungrily in dark, wooden shadows and the roiling deep, ready to suck their existence away forever. The women knew it. And they contemplated the cruel facts each day as they paced the lengths of their very own wooden decks, installed upon the roofs of the homes. Back and forth along the rail they looked out to the sea and waited for that boat to return. These were the whaler's widows. And where they walked, atop the house, praying, was the Widow's Walk.

It might be a bit dramatic, but this little intro to the Widow's Walk is fairly accurate and relevant to the East End. We live in a part of the world where whaling was a firm reality, and its history can be seen all around us. Check out, for instance, the Marine Museum in Amagansett. It covers the history of whaling and fishing on Eastern Long Island and holds a number of interesting artifacts from the era when we powered lamps with blubber instead of batteries. Sag Harbor is probably most famous for its whaling roots, and a casual stroll through town can become a fun exercise in searching for references to the extinct American profession.

With Post-Modern architecture being all the rage around here, it's not entirely uncommon to see Widow's Walks perched on the roofs of beach houses in all our towns. Things are a bit different today. It's more likely you'll see women sunbathing and reading Candice Bushnell or US magazine than staring off into the horizon and waiting for their dead husband to materialize, but nonetheless, they're up there. Maybe some are awaiting the appearance of a shimmering, 200-foot yacht and a Hip-Hop entrepreneur boyfriend, smoking his favorite Habano. Either way, they're up there. The Widow's Walk completes the aesthetic proportions of a classic, period-inspired home. It's a fantastic place to get some fresh air, enjoy the view that was built into the absurd price of your home, read a book (maybe even Moby Dick), or simply to get away from the chaos of August in the Hamptons. Now that you've read this article, and again, maybe Moby Dick, the roof deck is a terrific conversation piece. A guy can climb up and revel in seaman fantasies. Smoke a pipe. Tie a peg to your leg. Practice screaming "Aaargh" like a good pirate. Wear an eye patch. Suck on a lemon and complain about scurvy. Whatever your pleasure, what was once a symbol of melancholy and despair can be a great place to serve cocktails to your friends from Greenwich and admire the fleet of German cars and SUVs in the driveway.

Widow's Walks are not outrageously difficult to install if your roof is right. You'll need to build a box and, depending on your taste, decorative railing. Visit local museums or research some books on whaling history. Think Sag Harbor and Nantucket. Inspiration is out there. Maybe go modern and make a metal deck to match your oh-so-out, modern décor. Whatever you choose will be steeped in local history and that of New England. Do it right and you'll be applauded by houseguest after houseguest. Besides, think of the rental value for next summer when you're out at sea.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

This season has brought much excitement to the world of East End real estate, where there is always something new happening. And it is the big money that is spent on big estates that brings big excitement. The high-end market has remained in the forefront with multi-million dollar listings and sales taking place all season long. It began before Memorial Day when a Southampton oceanfront sold for $26 million.

Not only did high-end sales make news, but oceanfront rentals in the hundreds of thousands of dollars simply flew out the realtor's doors early this season, most gone before the first holiday weekend. The proof was not only in the listing price-tags but the sales too. Celebrities continue to flock east, paying what ever it costs to be here. Katie Couric was added to that very long list this year when she purchased a 7 bedroom, six bath summer home in East Hampton at $6.3 million.

This summer was no different than any other when it came to East End realtors finding unique & inventive ways to sell properties here. It is something they have become known for. There were exciting open houses such as the one that took place at the Church Estate in the Montauk Moorlands that combined a fashion event and broker's open house and included a runway show featuring Victoria's Secret models. The open house drew more than 70 East End brokers.

The Corcoran Group began a new advertising campaign that was tailored for the East End and focused on luxurious and coastal living. We saw interest by some of New York's major publications as they turned to the East End to feature not only the mansions and house tours but our tiny cottages and beach bungalows tucked away in fantastic locales.

The North Fork has also spiked much interest this summer with the exchange and sales of vineyards and the growing number of historic estates turned Bed and Breakfast. Last season's North Fork designer showhouse, The Jedediah Hawkins House, opened this season as a luxury inn and restaurant. Duck Walk Vineyards of Water Mill is now expanding to the North Fork, in Southold, where they are building another tasting facility.

What stood out most this season was the number of commercial listings that came onto the market. A record number of motels, marinas, vineyards, equestrian properties, retail space & restaurants have either gone up for sale or sold in just this past year. Early in the season, it seemed as if every motel in Montauk was on the market: the Memory, Ruschmeyer's Inn, the Lido, Shepherds Neck Inn and the Oceanside Motel. Shepherds Neck Inn sold to a New York developer who plans to transform it into a luxury resort and spa. Even the famed 22 acre Deep Hollow Ranch, known for its series of "Back at the Ranch" concerts, entered into the mix, listing at $17 million earlier this summer. Many of these properties have been family owned for decades. It seems property owners plan to cash in while the high-end market is still hot.

Making big news was East Hampton Point Resort & Marina in East Hampton entering that market with a $55 million listing price. A corner store in East Hampton, Calypso, sold at an unbelievable $8 million and will become Tahari in the spring. On Shelter Island, it was the two historic sister inns, The Chequit and The Ram's Head that went on the market. The Island Boatyard on Shelter Island jumped in as well, at $12 million, as did the palatial Bumble Bee Manor on the island at $35 million.

And in Amagansett, the Farmers Market on Main Street went up for sale. The Peconic Land Trust, the East End conservation group that has saved numerous acres and historic sites on both Forks, has recently made an offer on this historic piece that also includes an 1884 Victorian. The Land Trust has offered $9.5 million for the landmark 9 and a half acre property.

Just this past week an offer was made on a church in Southampton. It seems the King Kullen supermarket chain would like to expand onto Montauk Highway near Burger King and has offered The Southampton Full Gospel Church $10 million for the property, which they have reportedly turned down.

CATCH A FALLING STAR
Dear Dan,

I am terribly heartbroken, as I lost my bird Star, last evening in Southampton. We were staying at The Enclave Inn in Southampton. He flew out of the little cage, which I did not close, I opened the door and he tried to land on me, although startled he went up in the air into the night upon a tree.

Can you post in the paper about him? Hopefully someone will find him.

Maybe you have an idea of what else to do.

If anyone finds him, please call 917-576-7716 or my husband's cell 917-923-1736.

Thanks.

BEEP BEEP
Dear Dan,

First of all, I don't think you are a lousy writer...I look forward to reading your paper and your enlightening articles. I would paper a room with your covers if I could.

However, since you are a public figure on the East End and well known to practically all, it would have been to your benefit to back up to let the ugly colored SUV in at the pump. Your car was still running and if it were Alec or Stephen you surely would have accommodated them.

Me, well I know that I wouldn't ask anyone to back up unless I was under the car.

Take care and keep those papers coming.

RUMORS FLY
Dear Dan,

I read with interest your piece last week on the explosion of TWA Flight 800 and the question of possible US Government suppression of the facts.

In 1998 Random House published a serious book by Yossef Bodansky, called "bin Laden." In this book (three YEARS before 9/11) bin Laden is said to have attributed the BOMBING of flight 800 to one Imad Muganeyeh. And the details of the plot are given.

Now, we come to the plane that "fell" over Belle Harbour, Queens, shortly after 9/11. The Canadian Government is reported to have arrested a terror suspect who NAMED the person who blew up this plane. Cindy Adams, for her part, has written that Richard Reid was the SECOND shoe bomber; that the first was on the Belle Harbour plane. When the Canadian Government told us of the arrest and the allegation, my understanding is that our Government replied, in words to this effect: Well, we have no proof of that.

Ask me if I fly. Ask me if I trust the people who are supposed to be protecting me. Not.

SUVs TAKE SUPER
Dear Dan,

I read your tale about the confrontation you had with the guy in the gas station – mostly, my eyes bugged out when you said you had paid $74 + tip for gas for your gas guzzler – shame! I have a 1989 Honda Accord and on the third of every month when Social Security hits the bank, I buy $20 worth of gas that must last me for the month!

God! Life is so unfair!

DOG DAY IN AUGUST
Dear Dan,

In response to last week's article, T-Bone Arrested; David Caldwell's ten year old German Shepard's run-in with East Hampton Town, I wish to relate the following story.

For several decades, until 1999, I owned a home in Sag Harbor Village, down behind the Whaling Museum, occupied along with several Labrador Retrievers. During part of this time period, mid 1990's, I had one yellow lab named Max. For years, he enjoyed roaming the village, visiting local deli's etc. in search of treats local shop owners would set out. His favorite, seafood, from the Dock House on the Long Wharf, when it was open during the summer. Sag Harbor's narrow winding streets, along with sidewalks and it's historic district speed limit, made it possible for dogs to roam freely around town with little danger, and many did.

As time went on, the whispers of approaching age set in, and Max began to suffer from arthritis. This condition forced him to lay down and rest, during his daily visits. One evening the Sag Harbor Police called, I had my cell phone number on Max's ID, and ask if I would come down and pick up Max who decided to rest in the middle of West Water Street, on his way home. The police, who no doubt had more important things to attend to, were kind enough to cone off the area with traffic cones, until I arrived. After the third such episode, I was resigned to the fact that Max's days of his daily constitutional were over. Much the same as one hates the fact of taking away the driver's license of an elderly parent who can no longer safely drive, but knowing they're a risk to themselves and others, Max was relegated to the safety of a fenced in back yard, to live out his remaining years until he passed away of old age. Safe, but probably not terribly happy.

In closing, I would like to say, there were never any warnings, or threats of imposing outrageous fines, by Sag Harbor officials, for Max's escapades. It was handled in a professional manner. What happened to David Caldwell is nothing less than extortion, by East Hampton Town for issuing numerous summonses totaling $650. No doubt, animal control officers, being pressured by the town fathers to fatten East Hamptons coffers, much like traffic control officers being instructed to write, write, write parking summonses. A look at the annual budget shows the enormous revenue being pulled in by such actions. Finally, Caldwell was smart enough to get a copy of these local ordinances pertaining to his case. Many of these laws are either so outdated or look like they were written by a grammar school student, that they could be picked apart by any first year law school student.

Keep up the good reporting Dan!

Police Blotter

School Teacher

The former East Hampton school psychologist who was charged with rape and child endangerment after she had a sexual relationship with a 16-year old boy took a plea deal and was sentenced to three years probation, a $230 fine and ordered not to apply for recertification as a psychologist. Twenty-five sixteen-year-old boys have scheduled appointments with the new school psychologist because they are so depressed that the old psychologist will never be back.

On The Case

A woman called police to report to them that her beach chairs, an umbrella and a pushcart worth $250 had been taken from her private beach at her house in Amagansett. The beach thieves made off with the goods on the pushcart and supposedly left tracks in the sand. However, the tide came in and washed away the evidence before police could track them down.

Hoodlum

A seventeen-year-old from Greenwich, Conn. was issued a summons after he was seen drinking an alcoholic beverage in a parking lot outside of a grocery store in East Hampton. Those Greenwich kids are so tough. You really got to watch out for them.

Montauk Jerk

A man in Montauk called police to tell them that he was dragged out of a restaurant by patrons after he had spit on a woman. Police told the guy that he was a real idiot, then hocked a loogie on him.

ATM Stolen

A business owner in Sag Harbor reported that somebody stole an ATM machine that was worth $2,500 from outside of his store. The business owner noted to police that the ATM machine was empty and contained no cash. Police laughed out loud when they heard this, saying, "You mean to tell me a couple of idiots went through all of this trouble to steal the machine, cracked it open and found no money? That's just perfect." Police are thinking about offering the criminals no penalties for the crime if they turn themselves in, under the condition that the crooks tell them the story at a bar.

Exposure

A Manhattan man was arrested in Southampton by police after he was found exposing himself to motorists passing by him on the road. The man has been nicknamed "Pee-Wee Hampton."

Bad Boy

A sixteen-year-old boy was arrested in Southampton after he was found stealing two bicycles from a local bike shop and also for resisting arrest. The young lad wouldn't cooperate with police, who ended up having to call the boy's grandmother. The grandmother immediately began smacking the boy with her shoe. Police have hired her for their teenage crimes unit.

Eye Problems?

Police arrested a man in Southampton last week when they saw him on the side of the street in the village smoking pot. When police arrested the man, he was yelling out at the top of his lungs, "Dude, I have glaucoma! I have glaucoma!"

THE BAITING HOLLOW CLUB

We've just added 52 acres of rolling terrain to the Robert Trent Jones, Sr. designed Fox Hill Golf Course. Hart/Howerton Architects, known locally for the Clubhouse design of the Atlantic Golf Club and the new Sebonack Golf Club, created the conceptual design for our new clubhouse. The new clubhouse, practice facility, carts, and parking will all be accessible from a new private entrance off Warner Drive. Renowned golf course architects Hurdzan-Fry are helping with redesigning and improving our golf course to accommodate the new clubhouse and other facilities.

beachfront beauty
So at Corcoran, we're dedicated to understanding you.
The practical, look-to-the-future you... and the dreamy, look-to-the horizon you. Then we focus in on homes that fit the needs and desires of both—the beds, the baths... and the breathtaking sunsets.
It's the only way to make sure that where you live, will be who you are.
